Kristalina Georgieva, Member of the EC in charge of International Cooperation, Humanitarian Aid and Crisis Response, travelled to Burkina Faso, where she attended the Sahel and West Africa Week in Ouagadougou. She joined regional policymakers and international stakeholders for the launch of AGIR – Global Alliance for Resilience Initiative. This alliance was forged in Brussels in June 2012, with the core aim of building resilience across the Sahel region in order to prevent future food crises. This video shows extracts of a press conference which took place on 6 December 2012.

10:01:45	Soundbite by Kristalina Georgieva (in ENGLISH): Now we have a new Food Assistance Convention – it became effective on December 1st this year and what this convention does is shift away from giving food to giving cash and vouchers. So people can buy food where markets work and it stimulates these markets. So we don't end up feeding the hungry but killing the local farmers and we will only bring food when it is truly not available locally and regionally.	00:01:03
