INTRODUCTION

This standard Eurobarometer was carried out between 25 March and 4 May 2008. This wave of the standard Eurobarometer was conducted in 31 countries and territories: the 27 Member States of the European Union, the three candidate countries (Croatia, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Turkey) and the Turkish Cypriot Community in the area of the island not controlled by the government of the Republic of Cyprus.

The results of the Eurobarometer 69 (spring 2008) must be analysed in the context of the current global economic crisis which is having a negative impact on European growth and, therefore, on the everyday lives of citizens. This downturn, which was perceptible at the time of the Eurobarometer 68 wave, seems to have intensified: we now note the existence of an "economic ill-being factor" in European public opinion, whereas in spring 2007, at a time of sustained economic growth in Europe, we could speak of an "economic well-being factor".

European public opinion has therefore changed considerably over a single year, with a certain euphoria giving way to a depressed climate. The American economic crisis, due chiefly to the credit crunch and the constant increases in oil and commodity prices, is having a lasting impact on European economic activity and Europeans are today paying a heavy price. As a result of the gradual decline in the purchasing power of European households and the uncertainties hanging over financial markets, Europeans are increasingly worried about the future.

Accordingly, the perception that Europeans have of their lives seems to have deteriorated and this Eurobarometer is useful in assessing the extent of this deterioration. We note in this negative context that trust in both national and European institutions has declined, although the latter continue to record the better scores.

However, in this depressed climate, there are encouraging results for certain indicators relating to the European Union which, in general, seems to offer a possible solution to the economic and financial problems through its ability to shield Europeans from the economic crisis.

This third volume of the standard Eurobarometer examines the way in which Europeans perceive life in the European Union today, in particular as regards its political aspects. To that end, we shall examine the answers of the Union's citizens to the following questions: which policy areas should be dealt with jointly within the European Union and which policies should rather be managed at national level? Which aspects should be emphasised by the European institutions to strengthen the Union in the future? Which common policies do Europeans support? Finally, a section will analyse in detail the views of Europeans on further enlargement.

This volume was commissioned by the European Commission's Directorate-General Communication and was carried out by TNS Opinion & Social. The methodology used is that of the Standard Eurobarometer surveys of the Directorate-General Communication ("Research and Political Analysis" Unit). A technical note concerning the interviews conducted by the institutes of the TNS Opinion & Social network is annexed to this report. This specifies the methods used for the interviews and the confidence intervals.

The general analysis and the socio-demographic analysis are based on the results of the EU27, that is to say the average of the results of the twenty-seven Member States. This average is weighted according to the actual population of each Member State.

In this report, we shall analyse the results and changes at two levels: firstly, the average of the twenty-seven Member States (EU27) and secondly the averages at national level. The averages for previous years represent the results obtained for all the Member States which made up the European Union at the time the surveys were conducted. We shall also add brief comments on the way in which answers vary with certain socio-demographic characteristics of the respondents (gender, age, etc.), as well as with certain other indicators, such as the way citizens perceive the European Union's image, whether they trust the EU27, their knowledge of the European Union and their political leanings.

It should be remembered that there are three kinds of report for the Eurobarometer. The report entitled "First Results" examines trend indicators and a selection of new subjects intended to give a rapid operational overview of European public opinion on key issues. Secondly, this full report (composed of several volumes) analyses in depth all the answers to the questions asked in a standard Eurobarometer wave. For this wave, the full report has been divided into five different reports: the three "standard" volumes which deal with the Eurobarometer's historical indicators, the report on the values of Europeans and the report on European citizens and globalisation. Finally, the national reports are produced in the national language(s) of the country concerned. They focus more on comparisons between the national results and the European Union average. All these reports are published on the European Commission's "Public Opinion" Internet site.

The European Union's "Public Opinion" Internet site can be consulted at the following address

However, the acquis communautaire has been suspended in the part of the country which is not controlled by the government of the Republic of Cyprus. For practical reasons, only the interviews carried out in the part of the country controlled by the government of the Republic of Cyprus are included in the "CY" category and in the EU27 average. The interviews carried out in the part of the country that is not controlled by the government of the Republic of Cyprus are included in the "CY(tcc)" (tcc: Turkish Cypriot Community) category.

V. THE EUROPEAN UNION TODAY AND TOMORROW

This section deals with the following subjects:

1) Perceptions of the best decision-making level: the best decision-making level – European or national – in twenty policy areas.

2) Key priorities for strengthening the European Union: the policy areas to which the European institutions should give priority in the coming years to strengthen the Union.

3) Support for European policies: support for the single currency, a common foreign policy, a common defence and security policy, and further enlargement of the EU to include other countries in future years.

4) Support for further enlargement: support for enlargement of the European Union to include twelve new countries or territories (Norway, Switzerland, Iceland, Croatia, Turkey, Albania, Kosovo, Serbia, Bosnia-Herzegovina, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Montenegro and Ukraine) and whether Europeans feel that the accession of certain States or territories to the European Union could contribute to stability in the Western Balkans.

1. Perceptions of the best decision-making level in several areas

- Protecting the environment, scientific and technological research and, above all, fighting terrorism are frequently mentioned as areas in which the European Union should play a key role -

When asked to indicate whether decision-making would be more appropriate at European or national level in twenty areas, Europeans are divided¹. A majority of them consider that decisions should be taken jointly at European level in the following eleven sectors: fighting terrorism (79%), protecting the environment (71%), scientific and technological research (70%), defence and foreign affairs (64%), support for regions facing economic difficulties (62%), energy (61%), immigration and fighting crime (58%), competition (55%), agriculture and fishery and fighting inflation (51%) and finally consumer protection (50%).

But the people interviewed believe that seven policy areas are better managed at national level: pensions (73%), taxation (68%), social welfare (67%), the education system (66%), health (64%), fighting unemployment (57%) and, by a very small majority, the economy (49%). Finally, EU27 citizens are split right down the middle as regards transport: 48% consider that decisions should be taken jointly at European level and an identical proportion think that decisions should be taken at national level.

¹ QA35+36 For each of the following areas, do you think that decisions should be made by the (NATIONALITY) government or made jointly within the European Union?

1. Fighting crime; 2. Taxation; 3. Fighting unemployment; 4. Fighting terrorism; 5. Defence and foreign affairs; 6. Immigration; 7. The education system; 8. Pensions; 9. Protecting the environment; 10. Health; 11. Social welfare; 12. Agriculture and fishery; 13. Consumer protection; 14. Scientific and technological research; 15. Support for regions facing economic difficulties; 16. Energy; 17. Competition; 18. Transport; 19. The economy; 20. Fighting inflation.

QA35-36 For each of the following areas, do you think that decisions should be made by the (NATIONALITY) Government, or made jointly within the European Union?
-% EU27

In eighteen of the twenty areas studied, Europeans are less likely than in autumn 2007 to consider that decisions should be taken jointly at European level. Support for joint decision-making has fallen sharply in the case of energy (- 7 percentage points) and immigration (- 5 points). These declines all reflect an increase in the percentage of respondents in favour of decisions being taken at national level.

Though the fall is less marked in the other policy areas, nevertheless the majority trend is for a decline in support for Europeanisation.

However, it should be borne in mind that the last survey had recorded significant increases (energy, + 7; defence and foreign affairs, consumer protection, + 5; transport, immigration, support for regions facing economic difficulties, protecting the environment, + 4). Although the spring 2008 results show that levels of support for Europeanisation are down in comparison with the last Eurobarometer, the latest survey nevertheless continues the trend of the survey conducted in spring 2007.

Support for joint decision-making within the European Union has increased in two areas: transport (+ 2 percentage points) and fighting inflation (+ 2 percentage points); it should be remembered that the latter is the main public concern in Europe. Once again, the European Union appears here as a stabilising element and a factor for protection for Europeans in the face of the current global economic challenges.

Respondents in the United Kingdom, Finland, Austria, Greece and, to a lesser extent, in Sweden, the Czech Republic and Denmark are very much in favour of national governments retaining their decision-making prerogatives in numerous areas. The example of immigration is the most striking: 74% of respondents in Finland, 61% in the United Kingdom, 58% in Austria, 56% in Greece and Estonia, 55% in Denmark, 53% in Sweden and 43% in the Czech Republic would like decisions in this area to be taken by their national governments, compared with 38% of Europeans as a whole. In contrast, a significant number of respondents in Cyprus, Germany, Latvia, Belgium and, to a lesser degree, in Portugal, Lithuania, Poland and Slovenia consider that it would be beneficial, in most sectors, for decisions to be taken at European Union level. For example, 77% of respondents in Latvia, 76% in Germany, 71% in Slovenia, 70% in Poland, 68% in Cyprus and Portugal, 65% in Belgium and 61% in Lithuania would prefer decisions on fighting crime to be taken jointly within the European Union, compared with 58% of Europeans as a whole. For this item, high scores were also recorded in Slovakia (74%), Hungary (71%) and the Czech Republic (70%).

As regards terrorism, protecting the environment and scientific and technological research, a majority of respondents in each Member State are in favour of decisions being taken at European Union level.

Almost all Latvians and Danes (92%), Swedes and Slovaks (91%) and Germans (90%) are in favour of decisions to combat terrorism being taken at European Union level.

More than eight out of ten respondents in Germany and the Netherlands (85% and 82% respectively), and 81% of Swedes and Greeks also consider that the European Union should be the main decision-making body for environmental protection. At the other end of the scale, 59% of respondents in Austria and Finland, 58% in Romania and 56% in Latvia share their opinion.

In twenty-five Member States, public opinion is in favour of taking decisions on fighting crime at European level (only the British and Irish support national decision-making). In twenty-four Member States, a majority support European decision-making in defence and foreign affairs (compared with the 79% of respondents in Finland, 55% in the United Kingdom and 50% in Sweden who would prefer decisions to be taken at national level). A majority in twenty Member States support European decision-making on immigration.

In sixteen countries, a majority of respondents would prefer decisions to be taken at European level in the fight against inflation. This is the case for three quarters of respondents in the Netherlands (74%), 69% in Germany and 67% in Cyprus. More than two-thirds of British respondents take the opposite view (67%).

Question: QA36a.11. For each of the following areas, do you think that decisions should be made by the (NATIONALITY) Government, or made jointly within the European Union?

Option: Fighting inflation

Taxation is the only area where a majority of respondents in each of the twenty-seven Member States are in favour of decisions being taken by national governments. Respondents in the Nordic countries are the most likely to support this choice: 89% of Finns, 86% of Danes and 82% of Swedes. That opinion is also shared by 85% of respondents in Luxembourg. The situation is almost identical for health and social welfare, the only exception being Cyprus, where a very large majority of respondents (71% for health and 67% for social welfare) would prefer decisions to be taken at European level.

A majority of Europeans are also convinced that it is preferable for decisions on pensions to be taken at national level rather than jointly within the European Union. This point of view is supported by almost all respondents in the Nordic countries (94% of Finns, 91% of Danes and 90% of Swedes) as well as by 89% of respondents in the Netherlands, 88% in Luxembourg and 81% in France and Germany.

Respondents are divided as to the best decision-making level for economic matters, with a small majority favouring decision-making at national level. This result reveals a shift in opinion since the previous survey, when a small majority of respondents were in favour of decisions being taken at European level.

A large proportion of respondents in the Nordic countries (76% of Finns, 71% of Swedes and 68% of Danes) would prefer national decision-making, as would seven out of ten respondents in the United Kingdom (70%). On the other hand, two-thirds of Cypriots and Lithuanians (65% and 64% respectively), 63% of respondents in Belgium and 57% in Portugal consider that economic decisions should be taken jointly by the twenty-seven Member States.

Although the differences by country are fairly significant, they are less so when analysed by the various socio-demographic categories. The youngest respondents remain the most likely to believe that the European Union is the best decision-making level: 53% of respondents aged between 15 and 24 think that economic decisions should be taken jointly within the twenty-seven Member States, whereas a majority of those aged 40 or over (50% for those aged 40-54 and 52% for those aged 55 or over) think that the national level is more appropriate.

Likewise, those on the left of the political spectrum remain more likely than those on the right to believe that, in each of the areas on which the respondents were polled, decisions should be taken at European level. For example, a majority of those on the left (49%) are in favour of European decision-making as regards the economy compared with 46% of those on the right (51% of whom would prefer decisions to be taken by national governments).

2. Key priorities for strengthening the European Union

- Citizens believe that the European Union's key priorities should be environmental issues, fighting crime, immigration and energy -

When asked to choose from a list of twelve issues to which the European institutions should give priority in the coming years to strengthen the European Union, a third of Europeans mentioned in equal proportions (33%) environmental issues – in first place in seven Member States – and fighting crime – also ranked in first place in seven Member States -, followed by immigration issues (32%), in first place in four Member States². Three out of ten people polled mentioned energy issues (30%), while a quarter mentioned social issues (24%) and a fifth (20%) mentioned solidarity with poorer regions.

The other policy areas tested obtained scores of less than 16%: the internal market and a common European foreign policy (15% in both cases), scientific research (14%), European defence policy (13%) and a European education policy (11%). Finally, only 6% of the people polled mentioned cultural policy.

Only one policy area tested recorded a higher score than in autumn 2007: energy has gained 3 percentage points.

On the other hand, fighting crime has lost 3 percentage points as has European education policy. Foreign policy, defence policy and social issues have each lost 2 percentage points. The scores for the other policy areas tested are stable.

² QA39 European integration has been focusing on various issues in the last years. In your opinion, which aspects should be emphasized by the European institutions in the coming years, to strengthen the European Union in the future?

QA39 In your opinion, which aspects should be emphasized by the European institutions in the coming years, to strengthen the European Union in the future?
(MAX. 3 ANSWERS)

Respondents in the Nordic countries are particularly concerned about environmental issues and a large number of them mentioned the environment as a policy area on which the European institutions should focus in the coming years (72% of Swedes, 60% of Danes and 52% of Finns). More than four out of ten respondents in Austria, Germany and Luxembourg (43%, 42% and 41% respectively) share their opinion as well as 38% of French respondents.

Fighting crime is supported by 46% of respondents in Sweden, 45% in the Netherlands and 43% in Denmark; this policy area was mentioned first in the last two countries.

More than half of respondents in Malta (51%) and 48% of British respondents mentioned immigration issues, as did 47% of Spaniards. Immigration was also the most frequently mentioned policy area in Italy (35%).

Half of Hungarians (51%), 47% of Germans, 43% of Finns, 42% of Lithuanians and 41% of Belgians would like to see the European institutions give priority to energy issues to strengthen the European Union.

Finally, social issues top the list of priorities for respondents in Slovenia (45%) and the Baltic States (43% in Latvia, 42% in Lithuania and 38% in Estonia), while Romanians put solidarity with poorer regions in joint first place with environmental issues (39% for both items).

A socio-demographic analysis reveals significant differences by category: Europeans on the left on the political spectrum are more likely to mention environmental issues (36%, compared with 31% of respondents on the right) and social issues (28% versus 22%) while those on the right more often mentioned fighting crime (35%, compared with 30% of those on the left) and immigration issues (34% versus 30%). Approximately a third of adults mentioned environmental issues (35% of respondents aged between 25 and 54, and 29% of people aged 55 or over). However, 34% of the latter age group mentioned immigration issues and almost four out of ten (39%) mentioned fighting crime, compared with 29% and 27% respectively of those in the 15-24 age group. Finally, more than a fifth of respondents who had studied up to the age of twenty or over (22%) mentioned European foreign policy, compared with only one in ten (10%) of those who left school before the age of 16.

3. Support for current European policies

- Despite the difficult economic situation, there is still strong support for European policies -

Asked about their support for four current policies, a large majority of Europeans are in favour of a common defence and security policy (76%) and a common foreign policy (68%)³. Six out of ten (60%) also support European Monetary Union with a single currency, the euro. However, they are more divided on the issue of further enlargement (47% for, versus 39% against).

3.1 The single currency

Six years after the introduction of the euro, 60% of respondents say that they are in favour of European Monetary Union with a single currency, the euro (60%)⁴. This result represents a 1% fall on autumn 2007.

On average, support for the single currency remains far stronger in the fifteen euro zone countries: 67% - 7 percentage points above the average -, compared with 46% in the twelve other Member States. There are however significant variations between the various euro zone countries. Thus, the rate of approval ranges from 90% in Slovenia to 51% in Greece. More than eight out of ten respondents in Ireland, Belgium and Luxembourg (87%, 84% and 82% respectively) are in favour of European Monetary Union with a single currency, as are 80% of respondents in Finland and the Netherlands.

Within the euro zone, opposition to the euro is very high in Greece (49%).

A majority of respondents are in favour of the euro in all the Member States, except for the United Kingdom where two-thirds of respondents (66%) are against European Monetary Union with a single currency. The United Kingdom is the only country, among those outside the euro area, where a majority of citizens are against the single currency; opinion in Sweden is split down the middle on this issue: 48% of respondents are for the single European currency, compared with 47% who remain attached to the Swedish krona.

In Malta and Cyprus, which entered Economic and Monetary Union on 1 January 2008, 72% and 59% respectively of respondents support the euro. Support for the euro has increased by 9 percentage points in Malta and by 13 percentage points in Cyprus since autumn 2007.

3.2 The single currency

Almost seven out of ten European Union citizens support the idea of a common foreign policy (68%)⁵. However, the level of support has fallen slightly since autumn 2007 (- 2 percentage points).

Such a policy is supported by a large majority of respondents in all Member States, and is particularly high in Cyprus (86%), Germany and Slovenia (82% in both cases), as well as in Greece (80%).

On the other hand, fewer than half of respondents in the United Kingdom (49%) and 55% of Swedes support a common foreign policy. Although only just over half of respondents in Portugal (51%) and Malta (55%) are in favour of such a policy, these two countries had a particularly high level of 'DK' replies (22% and 26% respectively).

Question: QA37.2. What is your opinion on each of the following statements? Please tell me for each statement, whether you are for it or against it.

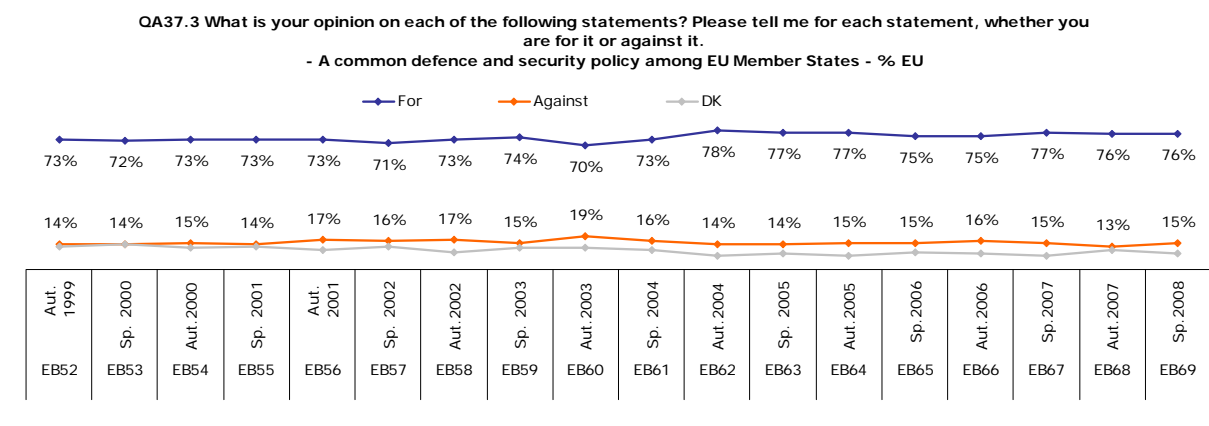

Option: A common foreign policy among the Member States of the European Union, towards other countries

Answers: For

3.3 A common defence and security policy

There is still strong support for a common defence and security policy, since more than three-quarters of Europeans (76%) are in favour of the idea, with majority support in each of the twenty-seven Member States. However, the result shows a 3 percent fall since autumn 2007.⁶

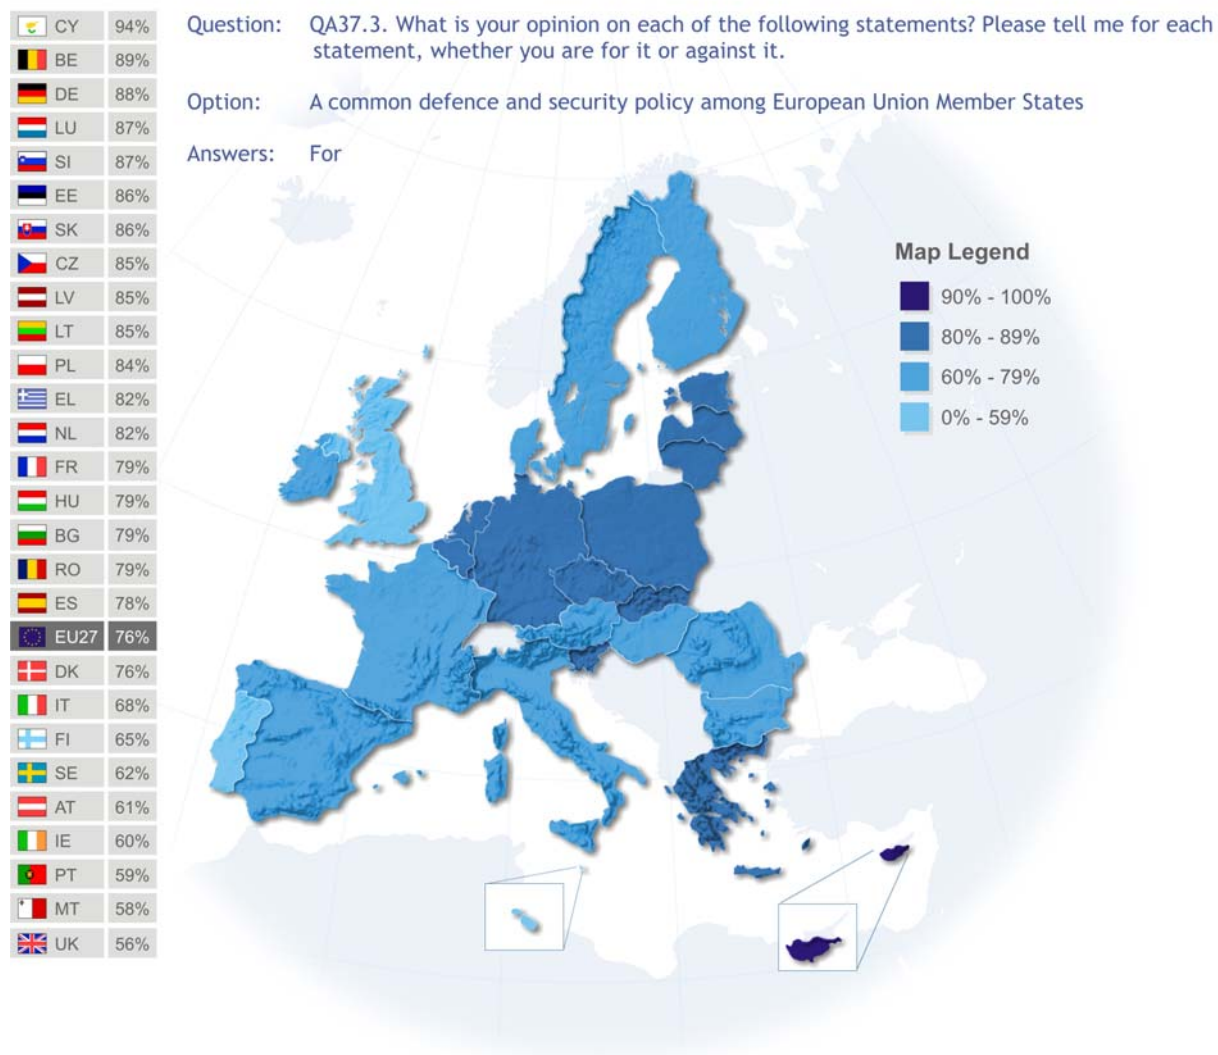

The results by country reveal similar variations to those noted in the case of a common foreign policy. Support is the strongest in Cyprus (94%), Belgium (89%), Germany (88%), Luxembourg and Slovenia (87% in both countries).

Once again, the United Kingdom (56%) has the lowest level of support. It will also be noted that the neutral countries are the least enthusiastic: 60% of respondents in Ireland, 61% in Austria, 62% in Sweden and 65% in Finland.

Fewer than six out of ten respondents in Portugal and Malta (59% and 58% respectively) are in favour of a common defence and security policy, but the number of people who did not answer this question is high in these countries (19% in Portugal and 26% in Malta, compared with a European average of 9%).

3.4 Support for further enlargement

Fewer than half of Europeans are in favour of further enlargement of the European Union to include other countries in future years (47%, i.e. 1 percentage point more than in autumn 2007), compared with four out of ten who oppose the idea (39%)⁷.

A majority of respondents in twenty-one of the twenty-seven Member States support further enlargement; support is particularly strong in the Member States that joined the European Union in 2004 and 2007. Three-quarters of respondents in Poland and Slovenia (74%), 69% of Lithuanians, 67% of Bulgarians and Romanians as well as approximately two-thirds of Hungarians and Maltese (65%) support the idea. However, only a small minority of respondents in the other European Union countries are in favour - only 27% of respondents in Austria, 31% in France, 33% in Luxembourg and Germany, and 36% in the United Kingdom.

Almost all respondents in the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (90%) are in favour of further enlargement of the European Union to include other countries in future years. This score is unchanged since the last survey in autumn 2007. The percentage of Croats sharing this opinion has fallen significantly since it was last measured: 51%, a decline of 15 percentage points. However, half still support further enlargement of the European Union, as do 52% of Turks. Support in Turkey has gained 9 percentage points since it was last measured.

There is also clear-cut support among respondents in the Turkish Cypriot Community for further enlargement of the European Union to include other countries in future years: 57%, compared with only 18% who disagree, and 25% who did not answer this question.

Question: QA37.4. What is your opinion on each of the following statements? Please tell me for each statement, whether you are for it or against it.

Option: Further enlargement of the European Union to include other countries in future years

An analysis of the results by socio-demographic category confirms that men, the youngest respondents and people who studied up to the age of 20 or over are the most in favour of European policies. Thus, six out of ten respondents aged under 25 (60%) are in favour of further enlargement of the European Union in the coming years, compared with a minority of those aged 55 or over (38%). Similarly, 53% of those who remained in full-time education longest want the European Union to continue to grow, compared with only 38% of those who left school before the age of 16.

In the same way, almost two-thirds of citizens who have confidence in the European Union's future (64%) are in favour of further enlargement, compared with only 30% of respondents who do not trust the EU. More than six out of ten respondents who consider that the European Union's image is positive (63%) share this opinion, compared with only a fifth of those whose perception of the EU is negative (21%).

4. Support for further enlargement

4.1 The future accession of twelve new States or territories

- A large majority of EU27 citizens are in favour of Norway, Switzerland, Iceland and Croatia joining the European Union, but have far more reservations regarding other countries and territories -

When asked more precisely about the enlargement of the European Union to include twelve specific countries or territories, citizens of the EU27 Member States as a whole are in favour of four States joining the European Union: Norway (78%), Switzerland (77%), Iceland (71%) and, to a lesser extent, Croatia (52%).

QA44 For each of the following countries and territories, would you be in favour or against it becoming part of the European Union in the future? %EU

On the other hand, Europeans are against the integration of Turkey (31% approve) Albania and Kosovo (34% for each), Serbia (38%) and finally Bosnia-Herzegovina and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (40%). They are divided about further enlargement to include Montenegro (41% in favour and an identical proportion against) and the Ukraine (43% for and 42% against).

Although a majority of respondents are - a priori – against Turkey joining the European Union, they remain divided on the question of the country's membership once it has complied with all the conditions fixed by the European Union: in this case, 45% of respondents are in favour of Turkey joining the EU, while a like proportion remain opposed to Turkish membership.

It is interesting to note that the proportion of respondents who are against Turkish membership even if the country were to comply with the conditions set by the European Union has fallen by 3 percentage points since the previous survey in spring 2006, while the number of 'DK' replies has fallen by the same percentage. On the other hand, there is a marked increase in the percentage of respondents in favour of Turkish membership (+ 6 percentage points).

QA45 Once Turkey complies with all the conditions set by the European Union, would you be strongly in favour, fairly in favour, fairly opposed or strongly opposed to the accession of Turkey to the European Union?
- % EU

Turkish membership is supported by a majority of the people polled in fourteen Member States, including 71% of respondents in Sweden, 67% in the Netherlands, two-thirds of Romanians (64%) and six out of ten Danes (59%). On the other hand, fewer than a sixth of Austrians (16%) and only around a third of respondents in Luxembourg (32%) and in France and Germany (35%) are in favour of such an enlargement.

Question: QA45. Once Turkey complies with all the conditions set by the European Union, would you be strongly in favour, fairly in favour, fairly opposed or strongly opposed to the accession of Turkey to the European Union?

It will be seen that, among the three official candidate countries - Croatia, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Turkey -, only the accession of Croatia, which is due to be the next country to join the European Union, is supported by a majority of EU27 citizens. 52% of the Luxembourgish and 43% of British respondents are nevertheless against Croatia joining the European Union.

It is interesting to note that support for Turkish membership of the European Union is stronger in certain other countries than in Turkey itself: while 55% of respondents in Turkey are in favour of the country joining the EU, Turkish membership is supported by 57% of respondents in Poland and Slovenia, 59% in Denmark, 64% in Romania, 67% in the Netherlands and 71% in Sweden. In the candidate countries, Turkish membership is supported by 61% in Croatia, 80% in the Turkish Cypriot Community and 85% in the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia.

A majority of the oldest European Union Member States (Belgium, Germany, France, Italy and Luxembourg) have the most reservations about any further enlargement in the future, but the strongest opposition to the inclusion of new countries is to be found in Austria and the United Kingdom; however, a majority of them support Switzerland, Norway and Iceland, although the level of that support is below the European average. The majority of Austrians also support the accession of Croatia (50%).

On the other hand, respondents in Sweden are the most enthusiastic about further enlargement of the European Union. In Sweden, a large majority of respondents are in favour of the integration of each of the twelve countries or territories mentioned in the survey.

Other than these general considerations, it is interesting to note the specific positions of certain Member States with regard to the countries about which they were asked. Thus, Slovenes are very much in favour of the European Union being enlarged to include territories of the former Yugoslav, whose citizens were for a long time their compatriots (72% for Montenegro and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, 67% for Bosnia-Herzegovina, 62% for Serbia, 57% for Croatia and 55% for Kosovo). Bulgarians (68%), Greeks (67%) and Romanians (63%) are strongly in favour of the European Union being enlarged to include Serbia where the majority of citizens are, as in these three countries, members of the Orthodox Church. On the other hand, more than three-quarters of Greeks (76%) are against the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia joining the European Union; an even larger proportion of them (78%) are against enlargement to include Turkey. More than four-fifths of Cypriots (85%) share this view.

A socio-demographic analysis reveals that, in general, the oldest respondents, those who left school the earliest and those on the right of the political spectrum remain less likely than young people, those who are the most educated and people on the left to support further enlargement of the European Union to include each of twelve countries or territories proposed.

The same trends also apply to the accession of Turkey should it comply with all the conditions fixed by the European Union. The majority of respondents aged 15 to 24 (54%), those who studied beyond the age of 19 (52%) and those on the left of the political spectrum (53%) support Turkish membership if the country complies with all the conditions set by the European Union; while half of respondents aged 55 or over (50%), of those who left school before the age of 16 (49%) and of those on the right (50%) are against the idea.

Among Turkish respondents, there are certain variations in levels of support for their country's membership of the European Union depending on the respondent's socio-demographic category: men (64%), young adults aged between 25 and 39 (64%), those who studied beyond the age of 19 (69%) and, logically, those for whom the European Union conjures up a positive image (88%) or who believe that their country's membership of the European Union would be a good thing (90%) are the most likely to be in favour of their country joining the European Union. However, women (58%), young people aged between 15 and 24 (57%) and students (51%) are the least likely to support their country's accession to the European Union. A majority of respondents in Turkey for whom the European Union has a negative image, and of those who consider that membership would be a bad thing (67% in both cases) are against their country joining the European Union.

QA45 Once Turkey complies with all the conditions set by the European Union, would you be strongly in favour, fairly in favour, fairly opposed or strongly opposed to the accession of Turkey to the European Union?

 (1-4) Left	53%	40%	7%
(5-6) Centre	44%	47%	9%
(7-10) Right	43%	50%	7%

A large majority of respondents in the candidate countries are in favour of the twelve countries or territories in question joining the European Union. Respondents in the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia are the most enthusiastic: more than three-quarters of them are in favour of the accession of any new State. The majority is smaller in the case of Kosovo, though 54% are in favour of that country joining the European Union.

Croats are also very enthusiastic about the twelve countries or territories in question joining the European Union, although their support for Serbian membership is less marked (51% in favour and 40% against). Respondents in Turkey have the most reservations, but it should be noted that approximately 30% of them did not answer eleven of the twelve questions.

Almost all citizens in the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (94%) say that they are in favour of their country joining the European Union, while seven out of ten Croats (71%) support the membership of Croatia. Fewer than two-thirds of Turks (61%) support the accession of Turkey.

These last results are fully consistent with the other replies given in these three countries to the various questions. Inhabitants of the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia are by far the most "Europhile", while the Turks are the most cautious. Finally, the Croat position stands somewhere between these two trends.

Finally, the answers of respondents in the Turkish Cypriot Community are interesting, since their opinions differ significantly depending on the country or territory concerned. Thus, while support is low for Serbia's accession (29% compared with a European average of 38%), they are far more positive than Europeans as a whole towards the accession of Bosnia-Herzegovina (47% versus 40%) and Kosovo (45% versus 34%). Finally, they are more enthusiastic about Turkish membership than the Turks themselves: 84% are in favour, compared with 61% of Turks, and only 31% of Europeans as a whole.

4.2 The integration of the Western Balkans into the European Union: a stabilising factor?

The majority of Europeans consider that the accession of the countries and territories of the Western Balkans (Bosnia-Herzegovina, Serbia, Montenegro, Kosovo, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Croatia and Albania) to the European Union would contribute to stability in the region (48%). Almost four out of ten respondents (39%) disagree.

QA46 Would you agree or disagree with the following statement: If the countries and territories of the Western Balkans (Bosnia and Herzegovina, Serbia, Montenegro, Kosovo, Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Croatia and Albania) join the European Union, this will help to stabilize that part of Europe.
% EU

The countries where support for the integration of the States of this region is the strongest are the most convinced that the accession of these countries to the European Union would help to stabilise the Western Balkans: 73% of Swedes, 64% of Danes, 61% of Romanians and 60% in the Netherlands and Cyprus share this view, while fewer than three out of ten Austrians (29%) agree with them. There are also relatively low scores in Italy (39%) and Germany (40%).

The majority of citizens in the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Croatia consider that the accession of the countries and territories of the Western Balkans to the European Union would help to stabilise the region (84% and 62% respectively) while barely one in two Turks is convinced. (49%).

Question: QA46. Would you agree or disagree with the following statement: If the countries and territories of the Western Balkans (Bosnia and Herzegovina, Serbia, Montenegro, Kosovo, Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Croatia and Albania) join the European Union, this will help to stabilize that part of Europe.

Respondents on the left of the political spectrum are again more likely than those on the right to express this opinion (55%, versus 48% of those on the right). Nevertheless, the majority of the latter also consider that the accession of the countries and territories of the Western Balkans would help to stabilise this region.

CONCLUSION

In response to the questions on whether decision-making would be more effective at European or national level in twenty areas, Europeans opted for European decision-making in more than half of the areas in question. Respondents have a pragmatic approach to the European Union: they consider that numerous policy issues go far beyond the national framework and that, against a background of globalisation with economies increasingly open to the rest of the world, national decision-making is no longer necessarily the most relevant level or framework for dealing effectively with today's problems. However, the level of support in the twenty-seven Member States for joint decision-making at European level has fallen since autumn 2007 in eighteen of the twenty areas. This can be explained by the depressed socio-economic context in which this wave of the Eurobarometer was carried out: all the indicators measuring support for the European Union are suffering because of this "economic ill-being factor". We note, however, that inflation, which is by far the main concern of Europeans, is one of the two policy areas where support for joint decision-making within the European Union has increased since the last wave.

Citizens of the twenty-seven Member States were also asked to choose the issues to which the Community institutions should give priority over the coming years in order to strengthen the European Union. Their answers confirm that they expect the European Union to help them deal with global issues, such as environmental issues, fighting crime, immigration and energy issues.

A vast majority of Europeans are also in favour of a common defence and security policy, a common foreign policy and a single European currency. On the other hand, they are far more divided on the question of further enlargement, which fewer than half support. When presented with a list of twelve countries and territories as potential new EU members in any further enlargement, citizens of the twenty-seven Member States chose only four of them: a majority of respondents are in favour of Norway, Switzerland, Iceland and, to a lesser extent, Croatia joining the European Union.

Europeans are still divided about the possible accession of Turkey, even if the country were to comply with all the conditions fixed by the European Union.

"STANDARD" EUROBAROMETER 69

TECHNICAL SPECIFICATIONS

Between the 25th of March and the 04th of May 2008, TNS Opinion & Social, a consortium created between Taylor Nelson Sofres and EOS Gallup Europe, carried out wave 69.2 of the EUROBAROMETER, on request of the EUROPEAN COMMISSION, Directorate-General for Communication, "Research and Political Analysis".

The "STANDARD" EUROBAROMETER 69 is part of wave 69.2 and covers the population of the respective nationalities of the European Union Member States, resident in each of the Member States and aged 15 years and over. The "STANDARD" EUROBAROMETER 69 has also been conducted in the three candidate countries (Croatia, Turkey and the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia) and in the Turkish Cypriot Community. In these countries, the survey covers the national population of citizens and the population of citizens of all the European Union Member States that are residents in these countries and have a sufficient command of the national languages to answer the questionnaire. The basic sample design applied in all states is a multi-stage, random (probability) one. In each country, a number of sampling points was drawn with probability proportional to population size (for a total coverage of the country) and to population density.

In order to do so, the sampling points were drawn systematically from each of the "administrative regional units", after stratification by individual unit and type of area. They thus represent the whole territory of the countries surveyed according to the EUROSTAT NUTS II (or equivalent) and according to the distribution of the resident population of the respective nationalities in terms of metropolitan, urban and rural areas. In each of the selected sampling points, a starting address was drawn, at random. Further addresses (every Nth address) were selected by standard "random route" procedures, from the initial address. In each household, the respondent was drawn, at random (following the "closest birthday rule"). All interviews were conducted face-to-face in people's homes and in the appropriate national language. As far as the data capture is concerned, CAPI (Computer Assisted Personal Interview) was used in those countries where this technique was available.

For each country a comparison between the sample and the universe was carried out. The Universe description was derived from Eurostat population data or from national statistics offices. For all countries surveyed, a national weighting procedure, using marginal and intercellular weighting, was carried out based on this Universe description. In all countries, gender, age, region and size of locality were introduced in the iteration procedure. For international weighting (i.e. EU averages), TNS Opinion & Social applies the official population figures as provided by EUROSTAT or national statistic offices. The total population figures for input in this post-weighting procedure are listed above.

Readers are reminded that survey results are estimations, the accuracy of which, everything being equal, rests upon the sample size and upon the observed percentage. With samples of about 1,000 interviews, the real percentages vary within the following confidence limits:

Observed percentages	10% or 90%	20% or 80%	30% or 70%	40% or 60%	50%
Confidence limits	± 1.9 points	± 2.5 points	± 2.7 points	± 3.0 points	± 3.1 points

QA46 Diriez-vous que vous êtes d'accord ou pas d'accord avec l'affirmation suivante : si les pays et les territoires des Balkans de l'Ouest (Bosnie-Herzégovine, Serbie, Monténégro, Kosovo, Ancienne République Yougoslave de Macédoine, Croatie et Albanie) adhèrent à l'Union européenne, cela contribuera à stabiliser cette partie de l'Europe.

QA46 Would you agree or disagree with the following statement: If the countries and territories of the Western Balkans (Bosnia and Herzegovina, Serbia, Montenegro, Kosovo, Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Croatia and Albania) join the European Union, this will help to stabilize that part of Europe.

QA46 Inwieweit stimmen sie der folgenden Aussage zu oder nicht zu: Wenn die Länder und Gebiete im West-Balkan (Bosnien und Herzegowina, Serbien, Montenegro, Kosovo und die ehemalige Jugoslawische Republik Mazedonien, sowie Kroatien und Albanien) der Europäischen Union beitreten, hilft das, diesen Teil Europas zu stabilisieren.
