ANNEX II - The Questionnaire

INTRODUCTION

The national report outlines the main findings from Wave 74 of the Standard Eurobarometer. The fieldwork was conducted between 12 and 28 November 2010. The Minister of Finance presented the 2011 Budget to the Maltese parliament on the 25th October 2010. In addition, during this period it was made public that a restructuring exercise is vital to address the financial difficulties experienced by the national airline. These factors may have had some impact on the participants' responses. The report covers a number of topics that reflect the current state of affairs in Europe. These include socio-economic questions, the general state of opinion across the European Union, the current economic climate and the impact of financial and economic turmoil, awareness on the European Union and its institutions, together with Europe 2020 as a means to exit the crisis.

1. STATE OF OPINION

1.1 General feelings and Expectations

The Current Economic and Financial Situation

Citizens of the European Union were asked to judge the current economic and financial situation of their local economy together with the European and the rest of the world's economy. Moreover, their personal job situation, their household's financial situation and the local employment situation were also analysed. The main findings of the Maltese compared to those of the 27 EU Member States are clearly summarised in following table.

Table 1 – General feelings

		GOOD	BAD	DON'T KNOW
The situation of the local economy	MT <sup>1</sup>	33%	60%	7%
	EU27	28%	70%	2%
The situation of the European economy	MT	28%	59%	13%
	EU27	26%	64%	10%
The situation of the economy in the world	MT	17%	68%	15%
	EU27	22%	67%	11%
Personal job situation	MT	61%	29%	10%
	EU27	55%	28%	17%
The household financial situation	MT	56%	41%	3%
	EU27	64%	33%	3%
The local employment situation	MT	30%	60%	10%
	EU27	19%	79%	2%

A general improvement on the Maltese sentiment on how their respective economy is fairing was reported over the previous wave. When asked on the situation of the Maltese economy, the general feeling of respondents on its performance improved by 5 percentage points over the findings of the previous Eurobarometer (Spring 2010). The latter contrasts sharply the situation in Ireland, where 84 per cent of the Irish claimed that their economy is fairing badly. One-third or 33 per cent of the Maltese are of the opinion that the local economy is performing quite fairly and up to expected levels. Nonetheless, the perception of the Maltese on the local economy is relatively better than their perception of the performance being currently recorded in other economies, namely the European and world's economy. 28 per cent of the respondents are of the opinion that the European economy is in good shape, whilst only 17 per cent claimed that the situation of the economy in the world is positive. This sentiment remains valid when compared to the EU27 average, as clearly shown in Table 1.

61 per cent of the Maltese are reported to be quite satisfied with their personal job situation, which compares very well with the EU27 average of 55 per cent. Moreover, Malta's employment situation also compares well with the EU27 average. Compared with the 19 per cent of the Europeans, 30 per cent of the Maltese are of the opinion that the local labour market is performing up to the desired levels. These findings contrast slightly the household's financial situation of the Maltese, compared to their European counterparts. 56 per cent of the respondents described their financial situation as good, compared to 64 per cent for the whole of the EU. This is probably attributed to the general local increase in energy prices during these past few years, namely a rise in electricity prices, gas and fuel.

Expectations for the next twelve months

Europeans are asked on a regular basis to state their expectations for the next twelve months on aspects related to their lives in general, their households' financial situation as well as the economic and employment situation in their country. In this regard, the Maltese are characteristically less optimistic about the future when compared to the rest of the EU. In general, the expectations of the Maltese on the aspects under review are that present conditions are going to remain unchanged in the next twelve months. Case in point the expectations on life in general.

Table 2 – Expectations for the next twelve months

The respondents of the survey were asked on their expectations on the economic situation in Malta for the next twelve months. 27 per cent of the Maltese think that the local economic situation is going to deteriorate, with only 19 per cent of the respondents claiming that the economy is expected to improve. These findings are roughly comparable to the EU27 average, where during the same period under review, 31 per cent of the Europeans expressed their concern that they expect their national economic situation to get worse. Furthermore, similar expectations on the economic situation in the European Union and in the world were reported, as can be seen in Table 2. When respondents were asked to comment on the local economic situation, the European Union and the World economy, results prove that a significant number were not adequately informed to answer.

Almost two-thirds of the Maltese interviewed think that the financial situation of their household is going to remain the same in the next 12 months, 5 percentage points higher than the EU27 average. The percentage of Maltese who think that their financial situation is going to get worse (19 per cent) exceeds those who think that it is going to get better (11 per cent). On the contrary, 21 per cent of the Europeans think that their financial situation is going to improve.

The outlook on the local labour market is very similar to the economic situation. 20 per cent of the Maltese claimed that during the forthcoming year they expect an improvement in the current situation, 5 percentage drop when compared to the 2010 Spring Eurobarometer.

Nevertheless, only 26 per cent of the respondents claimed that they expect developments for the worse, compared to the EU27 average (35 per cent). Perhaps, infrastructural projects being currently undertaken by the Government, in its bid to stimulate the economy are leaving some desirable results. Cases in point are the City Gate Project and the new parliament in Valletta, the extension of the Cottonera Waterfront project and a number of residential and arterial roads being reconstructed, just to mention a few. On a personal level, the absolute majority of the Maltese citizens (74 per cent) do not anticipate negative developments in their personal job situation, with 57 per cent and 17 per cent respectively citing that it is going to remain the same or get better. There were only 12 per cent who claimed that their personal job situation will get worse in the coming twelve months.

1.2 Important Issues

A Country's major issues

Respondents were asked to indicate the two most important issues Malta or their local economy is currently facing. The most important issues that proved to be of a concern to the Maltese can be easily highlighted from Figure 2 below.

Inflation, the economic situation and energy were of major concern to the Maltese citizens. Rising prices and inflation is still considered as a major issue for respondents; in fact it was ranked as first priority followed by the economic situation and energy. 45 per cent of respondents claimed that inflation is one of the prime issues Malta is facing at the moment, 32 per cent are of the opinion that the economic situation is of prime concern and 31 per cent of the Maltese showed their preoccupation on the persistent increase in energy prices, namely, electricity, gas and fuel. The latter is subsequently resulting to spill over effects on the headline rate of inflation, explaining why inflation proved to be of prime concern for most Maltese. The Europeans expressed similar concerns when it comes to rising prices and the economic situation, however, the prime issue for European citizens is unemployment, with 46 per cent of the EU27 average flagging this issue.

2. THE EUROPEANS AND THE CRISIS

2.1 Impact of the Financial and Economic Crisis

Two statements relating to forecasts of the economic crisis were read out to the respondents and were asked to indicate the statement which is closest to their opinion:

“Some analysts say that the impact of the economic crisis on the job market has already reached its peak and things will recover little by little. Others, on the contrary, say that the worst is still to come.”

47 per cent of the Maltese believe that the impact has already reached its peak whilst another 40 per cent feel that the worst is still to come. In contrast, 48 per cent of the Europeans are of the opinion that the worse is still to come.

The household situation for most of the Maltese citizens (56 per cent), does not allow them to make any plans for the future – they live day by day. The corresponding percentage of the EU27 is 34 per cent which indicates that Europeans in general have a better household situation. From a list of institutions, the European Union enjoys the highest confidence by the Maltese (31 per cent), in the sense that it is considered the best effective institution to take actions against the effects of the financial and economic crisis. Although to a lesser degree, the Europeans in general (23 per cent) were also of the opinion that the European Union is the most effective institution in this respect.

The Maltese respondents were divided in half in terms of opinion whereby 45 per cent are in agreement to the statement that the euro has cushioned the effects of the economic crisis, compared to the 44 per cent who expressed disagreement. However, this compares favourably well to the EU27 average, where 48 per cent of Europeans expressed disagreement that the single currency helped in alleviating some of the effects of the economic and financial crises. Among the Member States in the Euro Area, France (64 per cent), Slovenia (56 per cent), Cyprus (54 per cent) and Spain (54 per cent) expressed the highest disagreement to this notion.

2.2 Overcoming the current Financial and Economic Crisis

A number of factors were presented to the respondents and were asked to indicate the top three priorities to improve the performance of the European economy. As can be clearly shown in Figure 3, the top three factors presented by the Maltese were the reduction of public deficit and debt (47 per cent), improving the education and professional training (46 per cent), and to use energy more efficiently (37 per cent). The Europeans gave precedence to the education and professional training (47 per cent), followed by the reduction of public deficit and debt (35 per cent) and to facilitate the creation of companies and businesses (33 per cent).

A number of statements were read to the respondents, asking their opinion on the necessary reforms that need to be implemented to safeguard the interest of future generations. The results are reproduced in Table 3. The Maltese together with the rest of Europeans expressed their agreement on the need to reform for the benefit of future generations even if this means making some sacrifices now. The propositions that Malta needs reforms to face the future and that EU Member States should work together more to tackle the financial and economic crisis were widely accepted. Similarly, Europeans showed agreement to these two statements, the EU27 average being 87 per cent and 89 per cent of the respondents, respectively. 59 per cent of the Maltese claimed that they are not willing to reduce their living standards now in order to guarantee living standards for future generations. Furthermore, Maltese respondents were not in favour to the statement indicating measures to reduce the public deficit and debt in Malta are not a priority for now (53 per cent). Maltese respondents claimed that they are in agreement that urgent measures are needed to reduce the public deficit and debt without delays, with 74 per cent of the respondents who are in favour, very close to the EU27 average (78 per cent). On the other hand, 28 per cent of respondents were unable to react to the statement declaring that the economic crisis means we should increase public deficit to create jobs.

Certain measures aimed at combating the current economic and financial crisis are presently being discussed within the European institutions. The respondents were asked to indicate whether these measures are effective in combating this crisis.

The majority of the Maltese and Europeans are in favour of all the measures discussed within the European Union especially the measures pertaining to a stronger coordination of economic policy between all the EU Member States (an average of three out of four respondents are in favour) and subsequently followed by the coordination of economic and financial policies among the countries of the euro area, with 73 per cent of the Maltese who expressed themselves in favour.

The respondents were also presented with a list of statements related to the adaptation of certain reforms to the global financial markets.

Increasing transparency of financial markets	MT	73%	5%	22%
	EU27	87%	5%	8%

The absolute majority of the Maltese and other Europeans are in favour of tougher rules on tax avoidance and tax havens together with a greater drive to increase transparency in financial markets. Moreover, the majority of Europeans (81 per cent) and to a lesser extent Maltese (51 per cent) expressed themselves in favour of the introduction of a tax on profits made by banks. In contrast, although the majority of Europeans are in agreement to the introduction of a regulation to regulate wages in the financial sector and in favour of a closer supervision of so called ‘hedge funds’, the Maltese were relatively uncertain to formulate a stand on these two statements, with ‘don’t know’ replies amounting to 42 per cent and 45 per cent, respectively.

The respondents were presented with a list of institutions, namely the Maltese Government, the European Union, the United States, the G20 and the International Monetary Fund. Most of the Maltese are of the opinion that the European Union is the best placed institution to regulate and reform the global financial market, with 26 per cent of the respondents indicating as such. On a European level, the results show that the International Monetary Fund is perceived to be the most appropriate institution to reform the global financial market by 25 per cent of the Europeans, which was followed closely by the European Union (21 per cent).

Similarly, respondents were also asked how effectively the following three actors, namely the European Union, the Maltese Government, and the USA have acted to combat the crisis till now. Results are produced in Table 5 below.

Table 5 – The most effective actors to combat the crisis till now

3. EUROPE 2020

3.1 Perception on objectives

Europeans were asked for their opinion on whether the objectives set by the European Union to be reached by 2020, are too ambitious, just right or too modest, in its drive to exit the financial and economic crisis. The Maltese generally expressed their opinion that the key objectives formulating the strategy, commonly referred to as “Europe 2020”, are just right and hence they think that these are attainable within the stipulated timeframe. 50 per cent of the Maltese or more claimed that these objectives are about right, except on the target stating that the share of funds invested in research and development should reach 3 per cent of the wealth produced in the EU each year, where 47 per cent of respondents chose this option. As can be seen in Table 6, these findings in general, are very much comparable to the EU27 average.

3.2 Strategic priorities to exit the crisis

Respondents were asked for their opinion on what should be the European Union's priority to address a number of pre-determined issues and respective priorities, namely on, Innovation, Young People, Internet, Energy, Industry, Jobs and Skills and Poverty. These factors are considered to be of strategic importance and a means to exit the crisis. The results of the autumn 2010 Eurobarometer are clearly produced in Table 7, for ease of reference.

To fight discrimination and help those groups at risk	34%	25%
Don't know	1%	4%

Most of the Maltese citizens are of the opinion that priority should be dedicated to refocusing research on new challenges such as climate change, energy and resource efficiency (46 per cent). This priority is becoming even more important in the national agenda, explained by the recent increase in general prices and energy bills referred to earlier in the report. The top priority for young people is to get more youths into employment is understandable both in the local and European context. An explanation for this can be the fact that the human skill is the only resource available on the island, which is vital to be exploited up to maximum efficiency for the country to gain competitive advantage. Moreover, demographic trends, such as lower birth rates, ageing population and higher life expectancy are putting more importance on getting more youths in employment and 'lifelong learning'. When asked about energy, surprisingly enough Maltese did not show preference for the available option in further promoting renewable sources of energy as a priority, despite the fact that during the past few years several green initiatives were launched by the government to further tap this type of clean and efficient energy. Cases in point are tax incentives granted to both households and industry to install solar water heaters and photovoltaic panels, the recycling of waste, the treatment of toxic gases generated in landfills and others.

Finally, when respondents were asked whether they are of the opinion that the European Union is moving in the right direction or otherwise to exit the crisis and face the world's new challenges, 57 per cent of the Maltese citizens claimed that the EU is heading in the right direction, which is 11 percentage points higher when compared to the EU27 average (46 per cent).

ANNEX I – EUROBAROMETER “STANDARD” 74 – TECHNICAL SPECIFICATIONS

Technical specifications

From November 11th to December 1st 2010, TNS Opinion & Social, a consortium created between TNS plc and TNS opinion, carried out the STANDARD EUROBAROMETER 74, on request of the EUROPEAN COMMISSION, Directorate-General Communication, "Research and Speechwriting" unit.

The STANDARD EUROBAROMETER 74 covers the population of the respective nationalities of the European Union Member States, resident in each of the Member States and aged 15 years and over. The STANDARD EUROBAROMETER 74 has also been conducted in the four candidate countries (Croatia, Turkey, the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia and Iceland) and in the Turkish Cypriot Community. In these countries, the survey covers the national population of citizens and the population of citizens of all the European Union Member States that are residents in these countries and have a sufficient command of the national languages to answer the questionnaire. The basic sample design applied in all states is a multi-stage, random (probability) one. In each country, a number of sampling points was drawn with probability proportional to population size (for a total coverage of the country) and to population density.

In order to do so, the sampling points were drawn systematically from each of the "administrative regional units", after stratification by individual unit and type of area. They thus represent the whole territory of the countries surveyed according to the EUROSTAT NUTS II (or equivalent) and according to the distribution of the resident population of the respective nationalities in terms of metropolitan, urban and rural areas. In each of the selected sampling points, a starting address was drawn, at random. Further addresses (every Nth address) were selected by standard "random route" procedures, from the initial address. In each household, the respondent was drawn, at random (following the "closest birthday rule"). All interviews were conducted face-to-face in people's homes and in the appropriate national language. As far as the data capture is concerned, CAPI (Computer Assisted Personal Interview) was used in those countries where this technique was available.

For each country a comparison between the sample and the universe was carried out. The Universe description was derived from Eurostat population data or from national statistics offices. For all countries surveyed, a national weighting procedure, using marginal and intercellular weighting, was carried out based on this Universe description. In all countries, gender, age, region and size of locality were introduced in the iteration procedure. For international weighting (i.e. EU averages), TNS Opinion & Social applies the official population figures as provided by EUROSTAT or national statistic offices. The total population figures for input in this post-weighting procedure are listed above.

Readers are reminded that survey results are estimations, the accuracy of which, everything being equal, rests upon the sample size and upon the observed percentage. With samples of about 1,000 interviews, the real percentages vary within the following confidence limits:

Observed percentages	10% or 90%	20% or 80%	30% or 70%	40% or 60%	50%
Confidence limits	± 1.9 points	± 2.5 points	± 2.7 points	± 3.0 points	± 3.1 points
