Description	ISSS 2008 'The Development of New European Library and Information Sciences: Management Skills' is an initiative of 5 partner schools of library sciences and information management from Poland, Lithuania, Germany, The Netherlands and Bulgaria. 60 students and teachers will take part in it. It takes place in the different partner country and with a different topic each year. The current project suggests a new conception for the way this teaching occurs. Topics and teaching methods (team working, presentations, workshops, brainstorming, role plays) are innovative and welcomed by the students. The project includes interdisciplinary fields of study in the range from the traditional librarianship to the new ICT. Considering the idea of LLL the project aims to integrate new subjects in the LIS sphere in order to answer relevantly to the rapidly changing user needs in the information society. The emphasis is on subjects that are not included in most curricula such as leadership, management and communication skills, team work, etc. During ISSS students and teachers share ideas, knowledge and opinions in workshops, help each other in the different tasks, and improve their language skills. ISSS' informal communication and intercultural teaching/learning help breaking the interpersonal and intercultural barriers; developing personal and professional skills; making sustainable contacts for future cooperation in Europe.
