

How can Catholic school systems best respond to the need to promote non-discrimination and to respond to cultural diversity?

I believe that as much as a catholic school can be positive in the field of discrimination, so much it can be negative.

The positive side is that the catholic religion by itself respects different cultures and different ways of thinking. That is also why catholic schools respect someone's identity and his belief. But there can be a problem if there is someone, who belongs to a different religion but attends a catholic school. My opinion is that this is something that is not relevant, because if someone is at a school like ours, he accepts the way we do, so he also accepts our religion.

I am sure that a catholic school (our school) should be a model to others how to respect others. I have never heard someone calling names to the others or something like that. That is also because of being raised in a family which is more or less based on values and love. The best way to become a good person is that this way of raising up a child is that this continues in school. And I am sure that our school is one of them, which gives a great deal to the person who wants to become not just well educated, but also nice and understanding.
