

How can Catholic school system best respond to the need to promote non-discrimination and to respond to cultural diversity?

Catholic schools have advantages in promoting non-discrimination in response to cultural diversity because they have examples in the religion and in the Bible. I know that every human and every school can find an example for better life but the Catholic school system is in some way based on those two things so it is easier to direct young people if you give them an example to be better people.

However I do not mean that teachers should just point at the Bible and say: »Pupils you should live like that!« instead they should consider the holy writ and then show with their good example how to live non-discrimination. So the school system should bring closer the message of love to young people and they will understand why to live like that and what the »benefits« of such life are. But the school should not just show them an example but also have to guide them on this way.

So the Catholic school system has a great starting-point to teach young people how to live a good life but they just have to take it seriously and stand behind the viewpoints on which it is founded.
