

How can Catholic School Systems best respond to the need to promote non-discrimination and to respond to cultural diversity?

Religion has always been the most profound essence of every individual person. And Christianity demands from its believer to live teachings of Jesus Christ the Saviour with full deepness of their soul.

The task of a Catholic School is very unequivocal: to follow Jezus. That is the very best way to contribute to greater welfare in our world, which is unfortunately unfair. But we can justifiably question this statement because we know that society is becoming more and more heterogeneous in the cultural and the religious way. We could assume that religious schools will bring even more intolerance. Of course, this is not so. Christianity is a religion of love and peace. And the man who lives this peace cannot be a bearer of discrimination.

Teachers should be aware of the responsibility they have. They should be shining examples of such a kind of subsistence. Their role is to educate pupils in an optimistic atmosphere. If pupils feel that importance and felicity of this inner peace, they will become future carriers of it as well.
