

We believe that the top priority should be given to the development of supplies of bio-methane made from organic wastes and sewage. This category of waste is already available for processing in anaerobic digestion plants, without having to invest in growing crops with wasteful use of soil and water and energy inputs in fertilisers, mechanisation transport etc. If this waste is not processed then it will emit methane into the atmosphere where it will be 22 times more damaging as a GHG than carbon.