Nomination as an Ambassador	Carsta-Maria Fleischmann has been in a responsible position for 16 years. She is passionate about her job and has managed the highs and lows owning a business brings. She has continually learnt through formal training or conversations with young and old, men and women. She was able to build a company from an idea, putting into use the knowledge and experience passed on by others. This was a big advantage for her and so she is willing and motivated to pass on her experience to others. At present, 70% of her employees in Thuringia are women. Many of them work in leading positions, whilst managing family of course. She helps them to realise their dreams and motivates them. The company specialises in placing specialists and management staff and also takes over activities that are outsourced by companies. In individual meetings with candidates, the company always tries to find the most suitable type of employment. Mostly this is trying to find a permanent position in a company but increasingly becoming self-employed is becoming an option. The challenges are different, but starting a business does not require much more than a good idea, confidence and a lot of passion. Surrounding yourself with the right team, lots of hard work and determination means a life dream can become a purpose in life. Carsta-Maria is a driven manager who relies on team work and regular brainstorming. She always looks to make the best match between the person and the assignment irrespective of sector. This means it is very important that staff members are using their core competences and therefore enjoy their work. This helps reach goals and leads to the development of new ideas. The majority of her team members are women with different qualifications and qualities. Regular workshops lead to unusual ideas that are always considered for adoption in the company. Within this the company works for example on the “Initiative for Creative Talents” and the project “Silver Professionals” in order to work against the shortage of skilled workers in Thuringia.
