Nomination as an Ambassador

Natasa Milanovic is committed to production of healthy, organic food by using original innovations. For excellent and innovative work, Natasa and her company Biosil Ltd. already won significant international awards and recognitions. She promotes innovations in food industry at various exhibitions and trade fairs, where she is sharing best practices and motivating others in order to expand the network of innovators in organic food production.

As founder and Vice-president of the Association Bio Development she initiates development activities in the field of organic agriculture and sustainable development in Serbia. In particular, Natasa is encouraging other women to start-up and run their own business in organic food production.

About the company

Biosil Ltd. based its business on production and processing of organic fruits and vegetables. From its early days, the company has been recognized for innovation in food technology, such as winning a Gold medal at Eureka 1990. From then on, innovation in organic food production is driving force of the company, as well as environment protection and sustainable development.

Raising awareness

Natasa took part in a number of fairs, conferences, study tours and workshops about organic production and innovations in food industry. On one side she encourages women to get involved in organic production of food, and on the other she works on educating consumers about organic food and its advantages.
