Commitment by the leading partner

The European Commission has developed Level(s), an assessment and reporting framework for the sustainability performance of buildings. The version published in August 2017 is entering a test phase, to which organisations involved in building projects are encouraged to take part.

The European Commission provides technical support to organisations testing Level(s) during the test phase. Testing organisations will provide the European Commission with feedback at the end of the testing.

By signing this commitment, you and your team agree, to the best of your ability and knowledge, to complete and submit the:

• Test results for the indicators and tools, in the common reporting format, according to the option that you have chosen to work with. This should be with the European Commission by the 30th of June 2019, the latest, in order to allow the European Commission to take the results into account in the analysis of the test phase.

• Level(s) survey with feedback on your overall experience of working with Level(s) and your selected indicators and tools (the survey will be available from June 2018). This should be with the European Commission by the 30th of September 2019, the latest, in order to allow the European Commission to take the results into account in the analysis of the test phase.

Moreover, the use of Level(s) will be verified by Joint Research Centre for a sample of the test projects. This will investigate how the methods provided by Level(s) have been used and the way the guidance has been followed, and will require testers to provide more background information about how they have made their performance assessments. It will not be used to require reassessment by testers or to provide recommendations for modifications to the assessments performed by testers.

By signing this commitment, you and your team commit to facilitate the Joint Research Centre work to verify your use of Level(s), should your test project be selected.
