

MyUniversity project has equipped 14 universities from Bulgaria, Lithuania, Spain, Slovakia and Sweden with cutting edge e-Participation portals based on the same software solution. Each portal offers to the members of the end-user universities as well as to the members of other universities and stakeholders of the higher education area from these countries an opportunity to collaborate within decision – making processes that address several of the Bologna Action Lines.

All portals have the same structure but some look & feel features and the language of the user interface were customized for each university. The portals have an easily-accessible, in-depth content on subjects related to universities' everyday life, EU and national legislation and policy directly related to higher education, universities' policy draft proposals, Bologna Process developments, events and action lines.

The end-users universities are able to:

- ▶ Disseminate key information on the Bologna process;
- ▶ Easily publish national and European consultations on the Bologna Process on their e-Participation portal and then allow university personnel and students to provide feedback on them;
- ▶ Create online surveys and discussions that can enhance the existing traditional "on-site" meetings organized by them for their own decision-making processes;
- ▶ Gather their students' views on the key issues affecting them.
