

Dear people,

Please respect the net neutrality.

The internet is very important already and will become more and more important.

Social media, getting news, watching tv, calling other people, staying in touch, connecting to the world.

By restraining certain services, there's no stopping when it comes to censorship.

Commercial interests take over.

Where people should be free to communicate, they could be disconnected from the world because of old fashioned companies that are too slow to pick up the pace and deliver good content for a reasonable price.

Instead of growing into the future they try to control and restrain the world and harm people more than they should by trying to control the internet, trying to control the services we can and cannot use, even trying to control by disconnecting people completely.

The internet must stay free and neutral.

It's a necessity for a lot of people already, and for even more people to come.

Thanks in advance.

Regards,
Harold Snippert
The Netherlands