2009/385/EC Recommendation (2009 Recommendation on directors' remuneration)
complementing Recommendations 2004/913/EC and 2005/162/EC as regards the regime for the remuneration of directors of listed companies

{COM(2010) 285 final}

This Commission staff working document reviews the implementation by Member States of the Commission 2009/385/EC<sup>1</sup> Recommendation on directors' remuneration. It supplements, in a table format, the Report from the Commission on the implementation by Member States of the aforementioned Recommendation.

The 2009 Recommendation on directors' remuneration invites Member States to adopt measures in four areas:

(i) Structure of remuneration policy<sup>2</sup>

This part of the Recommendation is based on the idea that the structure of directors' remuneration, while it remains primarily within the competence of companies and shareholders, in consultation with employee representatives where appropriate, should promote the long term sustainability of the company and ensure that remuneration is based on performance<sup>3</sup>. Variable components of remuneration should therefore be linked to predetermined and measurable performance criteria, including criteria of a non-financial nature which are relevant to the company's long term value creation. The variable part of remuneration should be in proportion to the fixed part. In order to encourage that companies withhold variable remuneration in case of underperformance, the variable part should not be too high. Significant variable components of remuneration should be deferred for a certain period, for example three to five years, subject to performance conditions. Further, companies should be able to reclaim variable components of remuneration that were paid on the basis of data, which afterwards proved to be manifestly misstated.

With regard to termination payments, so-called 'golden parachutes', it is recommended that they are limited to a certain amount or duration, which, in general, should not be more than two years annual remuneration (on the basis of only the fixed component of the annual remuneration). Further, no termination payments should be made if the termination is due to inadequate performance, to ensure that termination payments are not a reward for failure and that their primary purpose as a safety net in case of early termination of the contract is respected.

(ii) Share-based remuneration<sup>4</sup>

To improve pay for performance and promote long term value creation with regard to share-based remuneration schemes<sup>5</sup> it is recommended that at least a three year vesting period applies to shares, and that vesting is made subject to performance conditions. Share options and rights to acquire shares or be remunerated on the basis of share price movements should be not be exercisable during at least a three year period and the right to exercise them should be made subject to performance conditions. In order to prevent conflicts of interest of directors who hold shares in the company, it is recommended that they should be obliged to retain a part of the shares until the end of their mandate.

<sup>5</sup> Schemes under which directors are remunerated in shares, share options or any other right to acquire shares or be remunerated on the basis of share price movements.

(iii) Disclosure of remuneration policy and shareholders' vote<sup>6</sup>

In order to facilitate the shareholders' assessment of the company's approach to remuneration and strengthen the company's accountability towards its shareholders, it is recommended that the remuneration statement is clear and easily understandable. Disclosure of information relating to the structure of remuneration is also recommended.

In order to increase board accountability, it is recommended that shareholders, in particular institutional investors, should be encouraged to attend general meetings and make considered use of their voting rights, including in the field of directors' remuneration.

(iv) Remuneration Committee<sup>7</sup>

This part of the Recommendation is intended to complement the recommendations with regard to remuneration committees from the 2005 Recommendation on independent directors. Remuneration committees have an important role in designing a company's remuneration policy, preventing conflicts of interests and supervising the (managing) board's behaviour in relation to remuneration. To strengthen the role of those committees, it is recommended that at least one member thereof should have expertise in the field of remuneration. In exercising its functions, the Remuneration Committee should exercise independent judgement and integrity. With a view to independence and integrity, it is also recommended that when a remuneration committee hires remuneration consultants, it exercises caution and ensures that the same consultants do not advise the human resources department of the company or executive or managing directors at the same time.

With regard to the role of the Remuneration Committee it is recommended that it should periodically review the remuneration policy with a view to proposing changes to the policy if necessary. It should also ensure proportionality between the remuneration of executive directors and employees of the company. Finally, it is recommended that it reports to the general meeting on the exercise of its functions and its members be present at the meeting for that purpose.

Principles of the 2004 Recommendation<sup>8</sup> which are evaluated in this report:

(v) Disclosure of remuneration policy and individual remuneration<sup>9</sup>

It is recommended that shareholders are provided with a clear and comprehensive overview of the company's remuneration policy through disclosure of a remuneration statement<sup>10</sup>. Disclosure of information on the remuneration policy allows shareholders and investors to assess among others the main parameters and rationale for the different components of the remuneration package and the linkage between remuneration and

<sup>9</sup> Paragraph 3 and 5 of the 2004 Recommendation

<sup>10</sup> All listed companies should publish a remuneration statement, which should include the remuneration policy for the following year, including information on the breakdown of fixed and variable remuneration, on performance criteria and on the parameters for annual bonus schemes or non-cash benefits, and a report on the implementation of the remuneration policy in the past year.

performance. Disclosure further aims to strengthen the company's accountability to shareholders.

Transparency on individual remuneration allows shareholders to assess remuneration in light of the performance of the company and exercise oversight over the implementation of the remuneration policy. To this end, the recommendation promotes disclosure of individual directors' remuneration packages and specifies the details of such disclosure<sup>11</sup>.

(vi) Shareholders' vote<sup>12</sup>

With a view to increasing shareholder participation in the decisions on directors' pay, it is recommended that the remuneration policy is put on the agenda of the shareholders' general meeting as a separate item. Thus, the remuneration statement should be subject to a vote which may be either binding or advisory. This recommendation is based on the assumption that the debate and vote at the shareholder's meeting is the only efficient way to ensure that shareholders can express their views and exert a real influence on the company's remuneration policy.

The tables below indicate the extent to which Member States have followed the requirements of the Recommendations.
