5. Other interventions

5.1. Administrative arrangement with JRC

On the basis of an administrative arrangement, DG EMPL intends to use the expertise of JRC for the following projects:

a) Modelling social impact assessments: Based on a review of existing quantitative techniques for social impact assessment and their use and relative merits and shortcomings, the work will consist of developing, testing, assessing and promoting new methods and tools for quantitative assessments of employment and social impacts of Commission policy proposals. These tools should be applicable to a wide range of impact assessments in different policy areas (incl. e.g. transport, energy, internal market, health, trade, etc.) and should be developed in close cooperation with Commission services and other relevant stakeholders. The expected outcomes are better understanding of quantitative methods and improved tools for social impact assessment, both aiming at a better overall quality of social impact assessments.

The estimated amount for this action is € 250 000

b) Relationship between inequality and a number of key social variables. This is the follow up of the calculations already performed by the JRC on the relationship between inequality and social variables considered by Wilkinson and Pickett (e.g. life expectancy, fertility rate, trust, voter turnout, etc.). The follow up will consider data at the NUTS2 level and will test different measures of inequality and social exclusion against indicators of social outcomes. If possible, country contextual variables over a large period of time will also be compiled in order to be able to implement a multivariate analysis while using econometrics of panel data. JRC work will be hosted in EMPL yearly publication “Joint Report on Social Protection and Social Inclusion”

The estimated amount for this action is € 100 000
