

Towards a more resilient society

CIVIL PROTECTION FORUM

25-26 NOV 2009 - BRUSSELS

www.civilprotectionforum.eu

The Civil Protection Forum – Towards a more resilient society aims to explore the concept of resilience, which is new to civil protection. Climate change is likely to increase the frequency and impact of disasters, and Europe has to be prepared to face this challenge. The Forum will provide an opportunity to start developing a comprehensive European disaster management strategy to enhance resilience.

Why attend?

The Civil Protection Forum will bring together around 500 delegates, speakers and exhibitors from politics, academia, the civil protection services and international organisations. Participants come to network, learn about new technologies used in civil protection, hear from international partners, debate lessons learned from past emergencies, discuss the future of European civil protection and much more.

Join them!

How to register

You can register on our website: www.civilprotectionforum.eu. Registration is free.

You can also follow the event live on the web at <http://webcast.ec.europa.eu>. A live chat function will be open during debates.

