

Temporary protection

September 2023

“As soon as Russian troops crossed the border into Ukraine, our response was united, determined and immediate. A whole continent has risen in solidarity. At the border crossings where refugees found shelter. In our streets, filled with Ukrainian flags. In the classrooms, where Ukrainian children made new friends. Europe’s solidarity with Ukraine will remain unshakeable.”

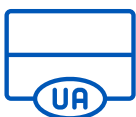

Ursula von der Leyen

Temporary protection for people fleeing the war in Ukraine

The European Union activated the Temporary Protection Directive on 4 March 2022 to offer immediate and effective protection to people fleeing the Russian war of aggression against Ukraine.

More than 4 million people were granted immediate protection in the EU, out of which more than 3 million in the first half of 2022.

It applies to:

Ukrainian nationals who lived in Ukraine before 24 February 2022 as well as their family members displaced by the conflict.

Many Member States have extended temporary protection to additional categories of displaced persons.

Persons outside of this scope are also allowed access to the EU to transit prior to returning to their countries of origin.

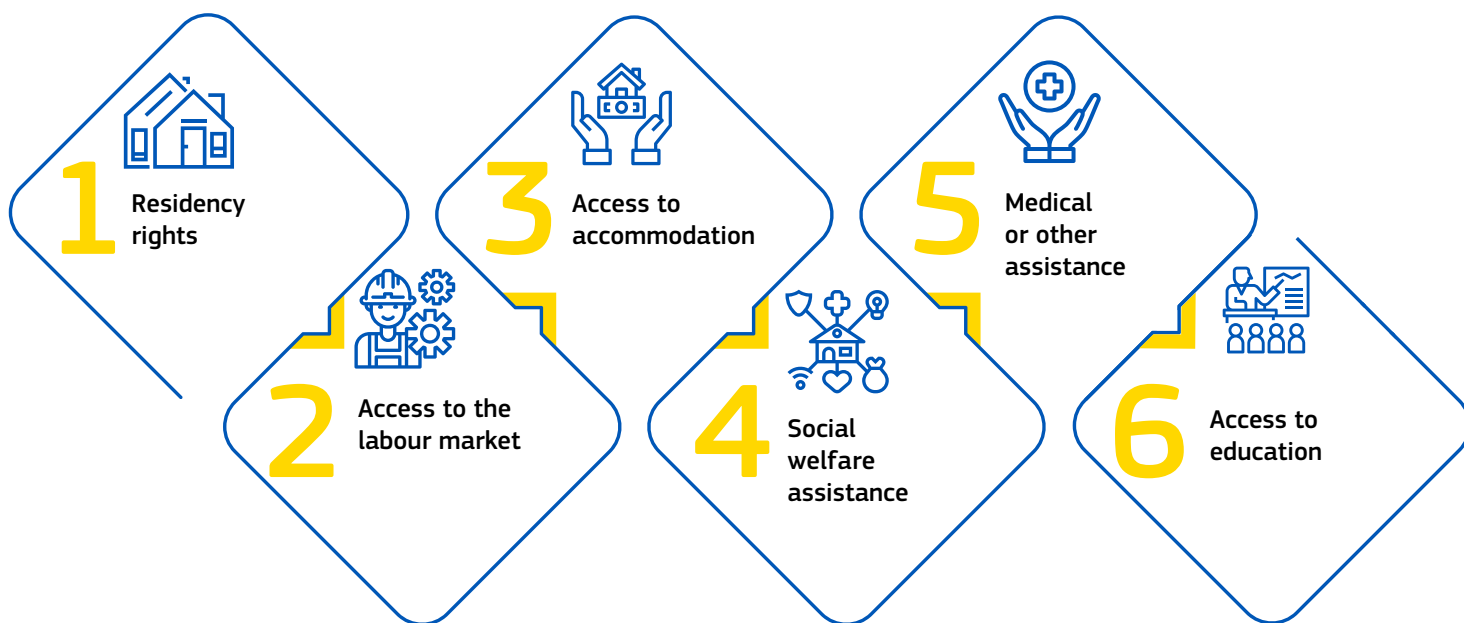

Non-Ukrainian nationals and stateless people who had refugee status or equivalent national protection on 24 February 2022 and their family members.

Nationals of non-EU countries other than Ukraine and stateless people legally residing in Ukraine on 24 February with a valid permanent residence permit and are unable to go back to their country of origin in safe conditions.

Temporary protection means:

The Commission has proposed to further extend temporary protection from March 2024 until March 2025.

Temporary protection allows to:

Reduce the risk of overwhelming asylum systems

Offer quick protection for those in need

Prepare for current and future needs

Promote enhanced solidarity and responsibility sharing
