STATE OF THE UNION 2017

LETTER OF INTENT TO PRESIDENT ANTONIO TAJANI AND
TO PRIME MINISTER JÜRI RATAS

Strasbourg, 13 September 2017

Dear President Tajani,

Dear Prime Minister Ratas,

The past twelve months have been challenging for European citizens and for all of us. 2016 was in many ways an 'annus horribilis' for the European project. From the Brexit referendum, to the terrorist attacks, to slow growth and continued high unemployment in several of our Member States, to the ongoing migration crisis, Europe was challenged in many ways. Our European values and democracies were tested by awakening populist forces at home and abroad, in parallel to growing geopolitical uncertainty related to the United States' presidential elections.

Hard work and political leadership were required from the EU Institutions and from our Member States to keep the European project on course in these turbulent times. We want to thank both of you and the Members of your Institutions for having supported, with strong commitment, our positive agenda for a Europe that protects, empowers and defends, set out by the Commission President in the State of the Union Address of 14 September 2016. This agenda found an immediate supportive echo in the plenary of the European Parliament and was welcomed two days later by EU27 leaders at the Bratislava Summit. Together with you, we have delivered on this positive agenda, not least thanks to the Joint Declaration on the EU's legislative priorities for 2017, signed by the Presidents of the European Parliament, the Council and the European Commission on 13 December 2016. Our European Fund for Strategic Investments, backed by our common EU budget and supported by the work of the European Investment Bank, has already triggered more than €225 billion in investments. The European Border and Coast Guard is now in place and fully operational at the EU's external borders, be it in Greece, Bulgaria, Italy or Spain. We mobilised EU funding for training the Libyan Coast Guard and improving the living and working conditions of the more than 3 million Syrian refugees in Turkey. We successfully completed the work on a stronger anti-terrorism Directive and on more efficient rules to control the acquisition and possession of firearms. We sharpened our tools against tax avoidance. We took an unprecedented step towards creating a European Defence Fund and agreed for the first time to work in the format of a permanent structured cooperation in defence matters. Jointly, we brought about the provisional entry into force of a fair and balanced trade agreement with Canada, a like-minded partner when it comes to food and health standards and cultural diversity. And we paved the way for an ambitious, values-based economic partnership with Japan. Together, we brought the EU and Ukraine closer together with an Association Agreement which should, over time, bring stability and prosperity to our Eastern neighbours across the region. Despite significant opposition, we ratified and defended the Paris Agreement as the best instrument to manage climate change. Last but not least, we managed to abolish mobile roaming charges in June and to launch free access to Wi-Fi hotspots in squares, town halls, parks and libraries across Europe as of 2017. Half-way through our mandate, we are delivering faster and more efficiently on all ten priorities set out in our 2014 Political Guidelines, to the benefit of European citizens and businesses¹.

Europe is now visibly regaining its strength. Economic growth is gathering pace, at above 2% this year (2.2% for the euro area), and finally reaching every one of our Member States, while surpassing the growth rates of the United States and Japan over the last two years. Almost 8 million jobs were created during this mandate – not only, but also because of, the actions of the EU Institutions, notably thanks to our European Fund for Strategic Investments, our Youth Guarantee, our European Structural and Investment Funds and the monetary policy of the European Central Bank. Both economically and politically, Europe now has more wind in its sails. Recent elections in several Member States have created a new momentum for those who stand ready to defend our European values; for those who want to shape and harness globalisation and build a sustainable future; and for those who choose cooperation and integration over withdrawal and isolation.

We should now make use of this new momentum. The window of opportunity may not be open for long, and there is certainly no time for complacency, as Europe's challenges remain significant: from instability in our neighbourhood and terrorist threats to demographic, climate and technological change; from the need for sustainable investment and a more resilient Economic and Monetary Union to the growing call for more social fairness and democratic accountability. We will only be able to tackle these challenges if we are ready to work together to take decisions now that secure Europe's future for the medium and long term.

The Commission's White Paper of 1 March 2017 outlines five scenarios for the future of Europe by 2025 and has been followed up with a series of Reflection Papers on the most relevant issues for our future. This was the start of a welcome debate across Member States. The Commission alone organised 129 Citizens' Dialogues on the future of Europe in more than 80 cities and towns in 27 Member States, including with national Parliaments.

We believe the time has now come to move from reflection and debate to the first concrete proposals on the future of Europe.

Today, we are sending you our intentions for the Commission Work Programme for the next sixteen months up to the end of 2018. As Europe looks to its future, we are presenting you with a Roadmap for a More United, Stronger and More Democratic Union to build on the current momentum. Our Roadmap is constructed in two parts. Firstly, we suggest actions and initiatives to be presented and/or completed over the next sixteen months, in line with scenario 1 of the White Paper and the Bratislava Agenda. Secondly, we suggest actions and initiatives which are more ambitious, more forward-looking and that will shape our Union until 2025; this combines scenarios 3, 4 and/or 5 of the White Paper, making full use of the untapped potential of the Lisbon Treaty.

Our Roadmap is based on the following important principles: the imperative to respect our common European values, including the rule of law; the continued focus on delivery and enforcement of priority initiatives that have a clear European added value and make Europe a better place for its citizens, in line with our 2014 Political Guidelines and our common belief that our Union should be big on big issues and small on small ones; the need to treat citizens of all EU Member States equally and never to allow, within our Union, the emergence of second-class citizens; and a strong emphasis on efficiency, democracy and transparency in all our common actions.

The Roadmap also anticipates that as of 29 March 2019 the United Kingdom will no longer be a member of our Union, following its notification under Article 50 of the Treaty on European Union. Up until and beyond this moment, we want to preserve the unity of the EU27 that we have built up over the past months.

Today's Letter of Intent and our Roadmap for a More United, Stronger and More Democratic Union are the starting point for the interinstitutional dialogue on the preparation of the 2018 Commission Work Programme, under the Framework Agreement on relations between the European Parliament and the Commission and the Interinstitutional Agreement on Better Law-making. We are strongly committed to this important interaction with the European Parliament and the Council, as well as with national Parliaments. We believe that our exchanges will provide a solid basis for a political and focused Commission Work Programme for the decisive sixteen months to come.

In the weeks to come we will consult the European Parliament and its relevant committees as well as the Council and the Committee of Permanent Representatives (COREPER I and II). Throughout the next sixteen months, the Commission will continue to make sure that our legislation remains fit for purpose and evidence-based and that unnecessary burdens are removed, including by taking forward the work of the REFIT Platform. We will pay particular attention to the adoption and implementation of pending proposals in the coming year. As the Commission's White Paper underlines, we need to close the gap between promise and delivery if we want to make the European project more credible and attractive. This is why we are looking forward to agreeing with you a new Joint Declaration on the EU's legislative priorities for 2018, building on the positive experience this year.

2017 and 2018 can become years of hope and renewal for Europe if we deliver strongly on our common agenda and show to our citizens that the European Union is there to protect, empower and defend them. The current geopolitical context makes such a Union more necessary than ever before. As EU leaders rightly said when they met in Rome on the occasion of the 60th anniversary of the Rome Treaties: We are 'firm in the belief that Europe's future lies in our own hands and that the European Union is the best instrument to achieve our objectives'. Let us therefore seize the moment and work even harder than before to meet the concerns of our citizens. The time to act is now.
