Subject Letter in the framework of the political dialogue: the role of national parliaments in free trade agreements
page 1/4

Dear Mr. De Gucht,

The national parliaments of the EU have been following with great interest the negotiations on the Comprehensive Economic Trade Agreement (CETA) between the EU and Canada and the Transatlantic Trade and Investment Partnership (TTIP) between the United States and the EU. A recurring issue between the European Commission and the Council when agreements have been reached, is whether or not these types of comprehensive agreements should be considered as coming within the exclusive competence of the European Commission (so-called 'EU-only' agreements) or that that they concern both competences of the Commission and of the member states (mixed agreements).

The chairs of relevant committees in national parliaments who are signatories to this letter believe that free trade agreements should be considered as mixed agreements, since they contain provisions that concern policy areas which are within the competences of the member states. For CETA, as well as TTIP (as well as can be foreseen at this stage), this is the case for certain elements of policy areas such as services, transport and investor protection. In the case of a mixed status, all Member-States, namely through their national Parliaments, have to ratify the agreement. In view of the important role national parliaments have in the democratic decision making process of the EU, we feel that it is of great importance that trade agreements such as CETA and TTIP are ratified by the national parliaments.

date 25 June 2014

Therefore, we ask you to consider comprehensive trade agreements such as TTIP and CETA as mixed agreements.

We look forward to your reaction.

Yours Sincerely,
