

Home > Work out to catch up

Digital Single Market

Video 11 February 2014

Work out to catch up

Preterm infants have a higher risk for neurological damage. They are given rehabilitation sessions a few times a week but basic neuroscience indicates that it would be necessary to provide them with an early, intensive and multi-axial intervention. Researchers at the CareToy project want to achieve that in an easy, affordable and efficient way. They have developed a baby gym where preterm babies can be stimulated to rehabilitation techniques at home and with the mere presence of their parents.

[1]

Watch the video [2]

Read more

CareToy project website [3]

Share this page

Source URL: <https://ec.europa.eu/digital-single-market/en/news/work-out-catch>

Links

[1] https://ec.europa.eu/digital-single-market/sites/digital-agenda/files/newsroom/caretoyvideo_6197.jpg[2] <http://www.euronews.com/2014/02/03/work-out-to-catch-up/>[3] <http://www.caretoy.eu/>