Digital Preservation Awards 2014: Call for nominations open

Created in 2004 to raise awareness about digital preservation, the Digital Preservation Awards are the most prominent celebration of achievement for those people and organisations that have made significant and innovative contributions to ensuring our digital memory is accessible tomorrow. In the last round in 2012, the EU-funded PLANETS project was awarded the prize in the "Research and Innovation" category. The project's work still continues through the self-sustainable Open Planets Foundation, sponsoring this year's awards.
