

Procurement opportunities for social enterprises under the new EU procurement rules

Amaryllis Verhoeven
Deputy Head of Unit
DG Internal Market and Services
Heraklion, June 2014

Overview

I. The new EU rules:

- More opportunities to buy social
- Public contracts can be reserved
- More possibilities for SMEs in general
- Simpler, more flexible rules
- Innovation partnerships

II. Making the rules work in practice

More opportunities to 'buy social'

- Freedom to decide "what to buy";
- But public authorities can:
 - Impose conditions as regards the 'production process' for goods & services (e.g., involvement of unemployed, disadvantages people), as a technical specification or as an award criterion;
 - Impose accessibility/design-for-all requirements;
 - Take account of the 'total lifecycle cost' of the goods & services bought (e.g., goods with low carbon footprint)
 - Require 'fair trade' labels

Public contracts can be reserved

- For sheltered employment undertakings, whose main aim is the social and professional integration of disabled and or otherwise disadvantaged persons (provided they makes up more than 30% of staff);
- Contracts for certain health, social and cultural services can be reserved for non-profit undertakings pursuing a public service mission & organised on the basis of participation, with a maximum duration of three years.

More possibilities for SMEs in general

New rules facilitate the participation of SMEs, by

- Encouraging public authorities to split large contracts into smaller subcontracts (they must be able to explain the reasons for not doing so);
- Simplifying the documentation requirements;
- Capping the minimum turn-over requirement (maximum 2 times the estimated value of the contract).

Simpler, more flexible rules

- Less paperwork (new single European document for public procurement, support documents only required from successful tenderer);
- Greater freedom to negotiate (less cumbersome procedures);
- Simplified publication requirements for regional and local authorities);
- Greater possibilities for accepting variants.

Innovation

- New procedure for the purchase of innovative products and services (the 'innovation partnership'):
 - Combined contract award (research services for the development of an innovative product, and supply contract), with competition phase at the start;
 - At each stage the public authority has the possibility to end the partnership

Making the rules work in practice

- 2014 – in-depth transposition assistance (discussions in the MS Expert Group)
- MS have various 'options' however – so implementation can vary across MS
- 2015: SWP offering guidance on social procurement
- On-going projects to provide assistance in social procurement (sometimes supported by EU funding)

Need further information?

[http://ec.europa.eu/internal_market/
publicprocurement/index_en.htm](http://ec.europa.eu/internal_market/publicprocurement/index_en.htm)