1 PURPOSE OF THIS DOCUMENT

This document is the final report of the study “Interoperability of CPV coding system in Electronic public Procurement”. The purpose of this document is to summarize the work performed during the project, and to describe the modifications, which are implemented in the revised version of the CPV. The aim of the project is to make of the CPV an efficient tool for public e-procurement. In order to do so, various actions have been undertaken:

- The comparison with other sector specific or general classifications and other initiatives in relation to product and services classifications used in electronic procurement;
- The evaluation of the current CPV structure and content in order to detect potential deficiencies in the hierarchical structure and the consistency, completeness and uniqueness of identification codes and descriptions;
- The analysis of the needs and requirements of CPV users in the area of electronic procurement;
- The proposal of a revised structure of the CPV;
- Improvements to the CPV vocabulary: codes have been added, deleted, modified, or moved to other places in the hierarchy;
- Revision of the Supplementary Vocabulary;
- Revision of the Correspondence table to other nomenclatures
- Revision of the Annexes II.A, II.B, II.C and II.D
- Creation of correspondence tables between the CPV 2003 and the new proposed CPV.

The outcome of the above actions is summarized in this report.

2 STRUCTURE OF THIS DOCUMENT

This Document consists of the following sections:

The Executive Summary describes the conclusions and the major changes, which are implemented in the revised CPV.

The first section describes the objectives of the project.

The second section describes the methodology used, and the different work packages of the project.

The third section summarizes the use of Nomenclatures in Electronic procurement, and the way CPV responds to this.

The fourth section describes the revision of the CPV:

- Areas, which have been revised;
- Areas, which have not been revised;
- The proposed new CPV (final result);
- The tables of correspondence and the explanatory notes.

The fifth section describes the result of consulting the stakeholders of the CPV.

Within this document, reference is made to other deliverables, which have been produced in earlier stages of the project, and which are available as part of this project also.

3 MANAGEMENT SUMMARY

This is the Final Report of the study “Interoperability of CPV coding system in Electronic Public Procurement”. This study has been conducted over a period of 13 months. The goal is to make of the CPV an efficient tool for public e-procurement. This study made a revision of the current CPV and suggested improvements of the Common Procurement Vocabulary classification system.

The following actions were taken, and served as input for enhancements and revision of the CPV:

- input from stakeholders and users
- analysis of the CPV, in terms of structure and content
- desk research
- extensive comparison to other nomenclatures, such as eClass and UNSPSC, in terms of structure, content, completeness, usage, weaknesses, update frequency

Based on multiple channels of input, the complete CPV has been revised. The nature of the CPV has been made more “purchaser-driven” and less “material-driven”. This should increase the user friendliness for the purchaser. The product “characteristics” have been transferred to the Supplementary Vocabulary, which allowed to reduce the number of product codes.

Divisions, which were strongly material-driven, have been redistributed over other divisions. Divisions with a limited number of codes have been grouped together, if the logic allowed. Divisions which could cause confusion or which should (partially) be considered together were aggregated and eventually redistributed. This results in a reduction of the number of divisions from 61 to 45. There are 22 divisions for products (versus 33 in the current CPV), 1 division for Construction work (just as is now), and 22 divisions for services (versus 27 in the current CPV). Mainly the following divisions have been aggregated and redistributed:

- Divisions related to the primary sector
- Divisions related to food and beverage and tobacco
- Divisions related to hardware and software
- Divisions related to energy
- Divisions related to transport services
- Divisions related to financial services

When revising the CPV (adding, deleting, modifying codes, and changing the hierarchy), a lot of attention has been paid to guarantee that the CPV is open for future extensions. In the current CPV, there is at some instances no adding of codes possible, because the groups are “full”. The revised CPV allows further extensions at the lower levels.

A lot of codes have been added, based on multiple input channels (comparison with other nomenclatures, user feedback about missing codes, market evolution of available products (especially in areas which evolve rapidly, such as Information Technology, Biomedical, etc.).

The table below describes the number of codes on each level of the CPV, as well for the current CPV as for the revised CPV:

	Current CPV	Revised CPV
Divisions	61	45
Groups	277	264
Class	897	969
Categories	1950	2340
Commodities	5138	5723
Total	8323	9341

The Supplementary Vocabulary has also been revised in detail. The structure has been revised, in order to be more logic, and more coherent with the structure and the logic of the CPV. This results in a revised Supplementary Vocabulary with 865 codes (versus 503 codes for the current version of the Supplementary Vocabulary).

As a result of the project, the following main deliverables have been produced:

- Annex I - Common Procurement Vocabulary (CPV)
- Supplementary Vocabulary

As a result of the project, the following correspondence tables have been produced:

- Correspondence tables between CPC and the revised CPV
- Correspondence tables between NACE and the revised CPV
- Correspondence tables between CN and the revised CPV
- Correspondence tables between CPV 2003 (the current CPV) and the revised CPV

As a result of the project, the following tables have also been produced (referred to as Annex II):

- Annex II.A New and existing CPV codes associated with a new description
- Annex II.B New and revised CPV codes associated with an existing description
- Annex II.C Deleted CPV codes
- Annex II.D Deleted descriptions
- List of unchanged codes and descriptions

As a result of the project, the following related documentation deliverables have been produced:

- Explanatory Notes to the Revised CPV
- Explanatory Notes to the Revised Supplementary Vocabulary
- Guide to the Common Procurement Vocabulary

4 OBJECTIVES OF THE PROJECT

4.1 BACKGROUND

By decision of the European Parliament and Council, the IDA Programme was set up in order to encourage information content interoperability through the promotion of trans-European telematic networks between Administrations, Institutions and Agencies.

In the scope of Article 9 of the IDA decision (“Interoperability with national and regional initiatives”) and as several Member States are already developing national e-procurement systems, interoperability between companies and public administrations is seen as a key factor to encourage cross-border electronic exchanges.

Article 6 of the IDA interoperability decision further addresses “interoperability with the private sector” and “solutions allowing the private sector to integrate administrative requirements easily into business processes”.

Following a study that provided an overall picture of the benefits and difficulties of the cross-border interoperability of e-procurement systems, the European Commission launched this project with the main objective to provide the revision and improvement of the Common Procurement Vocabulary (CPV), which has been developed by the Commission to facilitate the advertising by contracting authorities of procurement opportunities across Europe.

4.2 GOAL AND OBJECTIVES

The ultimate goal is to make of the CPV an efficient tool for public e-procurement. This study made a revision and improvement of the Common Procurement Vocabulary classification system. The objectives of this project are to:

- Analyse the needs and requirements of CPV users.
- Compare other sector specific or general classifications and other initiatives.
- Evaluate the current CPV structure.
- Propose an improved CPV vocabulary.
- Develop correspondence tables between the existing CPV codes and descriptions and the revised CPV proposal.
- Develop correspondence tables between the revised CPV and other important nomenclatures used in the procurement area.

4.3 OUTCOME AND RESULT

The result of the project is a revised CPV, which is more purchaser-driven than material driven. The hierarchical structure is more balanced. The number of divisions has been reduced from 61 to 45. However the number of codes has been increased (from 8323 to 9341). The structure of the Supplementary Vocabulary has completely been reworked, and the number of codes in the Supplementary Vocabulary has been increased (from 503 to 865). Divisions, which had a strongly material driven nature, have been redistributed over other divisions, and the characteristics of products have been transferred to the Supplementary Vocabulary.

The result of these modifications is explained in more detail, and with concrete examples, in Chapter 7.

5 METHODOLOGY AND INFORMATION USED

The project was organised into the following Work Packages:

5.1 WORK PACKAGE 0 (WP0): PROJECT MANAGEMENT

The aim of this transversal work package is to ensure timely completion of the project and to meet the project objectives through proper coordination.

The tasks involved in this work package include:

- Production of the different deliverables
- Liaison with EC project officer
- Organisation of project management board meetings
- Coordination and monitoring of the technical work done in the various work-packages
- Production of meeting minutes
- Organisation of special events, project result presentations...

5.2 WORK PACKAGE 1 (WP1): SCENE SETTING

5.2.1 OBJECTIVES

Users' requirements are assessed according to two different dimensions:

- The first one is the content of the CPV. The study was a good opportunity to check if the current structure meets the expectations of the users (both public buyers and suppliers). Differences with other classification systems were carefully assessed with feedback from users.
- The second dimension was related to the usage of the CPV. One key objective of the work was to analyse, evaluate and prepare the evolution of the CPV in order to make it suitable for supporting electronic procurement.

To be more useful to economic actors, the future European CPV should be made available in an XML format, compatible with other classification systems most generally used (ex. UNSPSC) hence avoiding to develop, install and maintain different programmes for proposing products on the European market and abroad. Such hypothesis should be carefully assessed, taking into account the views and expectations of actual users.

The final objective was to provide a CPV that is purchaser driven and not supplier catalogue driven. The challenge was therefore in reconciling the various buyer groups requirements and needs, and in stabilising the macrostructure of the CPV taking account of the legal requirements.

The work in this work-package determined the lacks of the current CPV by checking if the current structure meets the expectations of users and by comparing it to other existing classifications in order to improve its content.

5.2.2 METHODOLOGY

Understand how e-procurement practices and in particular, the use of coding systems in electronic trade documents and in transaction data may affect the CPV and its usage:

- Analyse the impact of electronic means on the procurement process.
- Determine how best the CPV can interact or integrate with tools and management systems used in an e-procurement environment following adoption of the new EU public procurement directives
- Ensure communication between different applications using XML standards
- Analysis of TED tenders for establishing purchasing trends
- Analysis of new trends in establishing classification systems
- Analysis of current similar national and international initiatives. An initial list can be selected from is provided by termnet (Linux.infoterm.org) and comprises 37 different classification systems.

5.3 WORK PACKAGE 2 (WP2): IDENTIFICATION OF REVISION AREAS

5.3.1 OBJECTIVES

This work package allowed determining market trends, establishing criteria for improving the CPV and deciding on priorities for its revision.

The work package analyzed the current CPV (main and supplementary) in order to detect:

- gaps and deficiencies in the hierarchical structure of the CPV,
- divisions/groups that required substantial revision, and
- classes/categories/sub-categories and/or precise codes that required specific adjustments/updates,
- ambiguous descriptions

5.3.2 METHODOLOGY

- Compare the CPV with other sector or general classifications and other initiatives in relation to product and services classification used in electronic procurement - for example UNSPSC.
- On the highest level (division), a new structure was proposed, to make the CPV more product type driven, and less supplier driven.
- For every CPV division, a gap analysis was made with a number of classifications chosen, in order to determine new categories, groups and classes and compare existing ones.
- Collect users' requirements.
- An extensive user survey allowed us to gather relevant input about missing levels, and gaps in the coding.
- Tender analysis: extensive research of the public tenders, which are published on TED (Tenders Electronically Daily), allowed us to understand users behaviour.

5.4 WORK PACKAGE 3 (WP3): PROPOSALS FOR CPV REVISIONS

5.4.1 OBJECTIVES

The objective of this work-package was to revise the CPV, in order to transform it into a “user friendly” electronic classification, buyer and supplier driven. This revision allows the Commission to follow up public procurement in more accurate way, suppliers to upload tenders concerning them and buyers to find easily suppliers in their procurement scope.

The final CPV was revised by a native English speaker.

5.4.2 METHODOLOGY

Taking into account the above input, propositions for improvement were delivered by batches. These propositions included:

- Modification of the hierarchical structure
 - Items to be deleted (duplicates, unused, out of scope)
 - Items to be added (missing items, new items)
 - Items to be moved (modification of the structure)
- Corrections of codes and descriptions
 - Descriptions to be modified
 - Codes to be corrected
 - Duplicates to be deleted

5.5 WORK PACKAGE 4 (WP4): CORRESPONDENCE TABLES

5.5.1 OBJECTIVES

The primary objective of this workpackage is to define the mapping relationships between the revised CPV and :

- the old (current) CPV
- the NACE, CPC, CN nomenclatures

The legally required tables (current/new CPV and CPV with NACE/CPC/CN) were our main priority.

5.5.2 METHODOLOGY

The mapping between the new CPV and the previous version, as well as with other classification schemes was defined as a companion task to the updating process carried-out in WP 3. As each CPV description was to be checked, documented and perhaps modified (renamed, split into several sub-categories, merged with another one), its correspondence with terms in other classification schemas was looked at and immediately documented.

6 USE OF NOMENCLATURES IN ELECTRONIC PROCUREMENT

Electronic means are a fast growing phenomenon in large organisations. Electronic Marketplaces are also gaining in importance. They are an interface between buyers and sellers. For implementing this efficiently, there is a need for a well-structured and clear classification or e-catalogue. The current structure of CPV corresponds to the needs of electronic purchasing and is compliant to the technical requirements. This is further elaborated in WP1 Intermediary Report – Generic Classification Criteria V1.7, section 6.9, “Management Reporting / Spend Analysis” and section 6.10, “Suitable for Electronic Commerce”.

It has been analysed if and how CPV can integrate and interact with e-procurement tools. The current structure allows the CPV to be easily uploaded in state of the art e-procurement systems. Through contacts with some of the major players in the domain of e-procurement solutions, it has been concluded that CPV is compliant to the technical requirements of these applications. This is further elaborated in WP1 Intermediary Report – Generic Classification Criteria V1.7, section 6.10, “Suitable for Electronic Commerce”

XML is widely accepted as the standard for data integration; the EGIF (eGovernment Interoperability Framework) has made a strategic decision to adopt XML as a core standard for data integration between Government and Business. The CPV Structure allows Electronic Commerce, and is compliant for communication, using XML Standards. This is further elaborated in WP1 Intermediary Report – Generic Classification Criteria V1.7, section 6.10, “Suitable for Electronic Commerce”

7 REVISION OF THE CPV

7.1 AREAS REVISED

7.1.1 IMPROVE THE “BUYER-DRIVEN” NATURE OF THE CPV

The current CPV was partially “material” driven, and partially “product type” driven. In order to become a more buyer-driven nomenclature, the CPV has to be more “product-type” driven. Therefore, all the divisions of the CPV have been examined. When necessary, they have been revised and reorganised, which obviously has an impact also on the lower levels (groups, classes, category, commodities) of the CPV. Within the revised CPV, 22 divisions are “product related” (versus 33 in the current version), 1 division is for construction works, and 22 divisions are “services” (versus 27 in the current version).

The table below lists the resulting divisions of the revised CPV:

7.1.2 HIERARCHICAL STRUCTURE OF THE CPV – REGROUPING OF DIVISIONS

The number of divisions has been reduced (from 61 to 45). Some of the existing divisions have been brought to lower levels (as a Group, Class or Category) in other divisions. Reasons for these are:

- the old divisions did not contain a lot of codes;
- there was no logic for having these codes as a separate division;
- in terms of number and volume of tenders, these divisions were not substantial;

Examples of divisions, which have been integrated in lower levels:

Division “02000000-4 Forestry and logging products” has been converted to Group 03400000-4, as a part of division “03000000-1 Agricultural, farming, fishing, forestry and related products”.

Division “13000000-4 Metal Ores” has been converted to Class 14610000-0, as a part of division “14000000-1 Mining, basic metals and related products”.

Division “12000000-7 Uranium and thorium ores” has been converted to Category 14613000-1, as a part of division “14000000-1 Mining, basic metals and related products”.

Division “37000000-8 Recovered Secondary Raw Materials” has been converted to Group 14900000-0, as a part of division “14000000-1 Mining, basic metals and related products”.

Division “16000000-5 Tobacco, tobacco goods and supplies” has been converted to Class 15990000-4, as a part of division “15000000-8 Food, beverages, tobacco and related products.”

Division “52000000-9 Retail Trade Services” has been converted to Group 55900000-9, as a part of division “55000000-0 Hotel, restaurant and retail trade services.”

Division “62000000-2 Air Transport Services” has been converted to Group 60400000-2, as a part of division “60000000-8 Transport Services.”

Division “61000000-5 Water Transport Services” has been converted to Group 60600000-4, as a part of division “60000000-8 Transport Services.”

Division “91000000-4 Membership organisation services” has been converted to Group 98100000-4, as a part of division “98000000-3 Other community, social and personal services.”

Division “93000000-8 miscellaneous services” has been converted to Group 98300000-6, as a part of division “98000000-3 Other community, social and personal services.”

Division “95000000-2 Private households with employed persons” has been converted to Group 98500000-8, as a part of division “98000000-3 Other community, social and personal services.”

Division “99000000-0 Services provided by extra-territorial organisations and bodies.” has been converted to Group 98900000-2, as a part of division “98000000-3 Other community, social and personal services.”

The same principle has been applied to lower levels, according to the same reasoning.

Some examples of groups, which have been converted to classes or categories:

Group “01300000-0 Products of mixed farming.” has been converted to Category 03143000-5, as a part of division “03000000-1 Agricultural, farming, fishing, forestry and related products”.

Group “02100000-5 Wood.” has been converted to Class 03410000-7, as a part of division “03000000-1 Agricultural, farming, fishing, forestry and related products”.

Group “40100000-3 Electricity.” has been converted to Class 09310000-5, as a part of division “09000000-3 Petroleum products, fuel and other sources of energy.”.

The table below gives an overview of the divisions of the current CPV, and the corresponding code of the new CPV. Divisions, which have no new code against it, have been distributed over multiple other divisions or groups.

For example, the divisions “17000000-2 Textiles and textile articles”, “19000000-6 Leather, leather products and footwear”, and “25000000-1 Rubber, plastic and film products” are reworked and integrated into divisions, such as “18000000-9 Clothing, footwear, luggage articles and accessories” and “19000000-6 Leather and textile fabrics, plastic and rubber materials”. These reflect more the purpose of the product and make abstraction of the material at the highest level.

7.1.3 STRUCTURE OF THE CPV – POSSIBILITY FOR FUTURE EXTENSIONS

In some divisions of the current CPV, there is a bottleneck for future expansion (no more codes or levels available). When revising and restructuring the CPV, it has been taken into account that future extensions should be possible without changing the structure.

The table below lists the number of codes for each level of the nomenclature, as well for the current CPV as for the revised CPV.

	Current CPV	New CPV
Divisions	61	45
Groups	277	264
Class	897	969
Categories	1950	2340
Commodities	5138	5723
Total	8323	9341

Some examples of revision, which improve the possibility for future extensions:

REVISION OF DIVISIONS RELATED TO FINANCIAL SERVICES

Divisions “66000000-0 Financial intermediation services” and “6700000000-7 Services auxiliary to financial intermediation” have been brought together in division “66000000-0 Financial and insurances services”. The content of these two divisions has been reworked, in order to be less confusing and more coherent.

Some examples:

7.1.6 REVISION OF CODES RELATED TO HARDWARE AND SOFTWARE

In the current CPV, some of the software codes are integrated into division “30000000-9 Office and computing machinery, equipment and supplies”.

In the revised CPV, all codes related to software, have been regrouped into division “48000000-8 Software and computer systems”. All services related to hardware and software, have been regrouped under division “72000000-5 IT Consultancy and support”.

As the sector of Information Technology is a sector, which evolves rapidly, also new codes have been added to these two divisions.

Some examples:

“30241210-5 Project Management software” has become “48331000-7 Project Management software”.
“30241700-7 Anti-virus software” has become “48761000-0 Anti-virus software”.
“30246200-7 Emulation Software” has become “48518000-2 Emulation Software”

7.1.7 REVISION OF CODES RELATED TO ENERGY

In the current CPV, multiple divisions are related to sources of energy. The following divisions have been integrated into one single division “09000000-3 Petroleum products, fuel, electricity and other sources of energy”:

10000000-3 Coal, lignite, peat and other coal-related products

7.1.8 REVISION OF CODES RELATED TO FOOD, BEVERAGE AND TOBACCO

In the revised CPV, the divisions “15000000-8 Food products and beverages” and “16000000-5 Tobacco, tobacco goods and supplies”, have been merged into one single division “15000000-8 Food, beverages, tobacco and related products”. In other nomenclatures, such as UNSPSC, the content of these divisions is also grouped together in one single division.

7.1.9 REVISION OF CODES RELATED TO THE PRIMARY SECTOR

In the current CPV, multiple divisions are related to the primary sector (agriculture, forestry, fishing). The following divisions have been integrated into one single division “03000000-1 Agricultural, farming, fishing, forestry and related products”: In other nomenclatures, such as UNSPSC, the content of these divisions is also grouped together in one single division.

01000000-7 Agricultural, horticultural, hunting and related products
02000000-4 Forestry and logging products
05000000-5 Fish, fishing products and other by-products of the fishing industry
20000000-6 Wood, wood products, cork products, basketware and wickerwork

Note: division 20000000-4 has partially been taken into division 03000000-1, and partially been redistributed over other divisions.

7.1.10 REVISION OF CODES RELATED TO TRANSPORT

In the current CPV, multiple divisions are related to transport products and transport services. The following divisions have been integrated into one single product division “34000000-7 Transport equipment and auxiliary products to transportation”:

34000000-7 Motor Vehicles, trailers and vehicle parts

61000000-5 Water transport services
62000000-2 Air transport services

7.1.11 REVISION OF THE SUPPLEMENTARY VOCABULARY

The structure of the supplementary vocabulary has been revised in detail. The new structure is as follows:

AB12-3, where:

A = one alphanumeric digit, indicating the section. There are 19 sections in the revised Supplementary Vocabulary

B = one alphanumeric digit, indicating the group. There are 41 groups in the revised Supplementary Vocabulary (combination of A and B)

12 = 2 numerical digits, indicating the attribute. There are 865 attributes in the revised Supplementary Vocabulary (combination of A, B and 12)

3 = check digit

The current version of the Supplementary Vocabulary contains 503 codes.

The content of the supplementary vocabulary has completely been revised and reorganised. It contains a better logic, and is coherent with the structure and the logic of the CPV.

The following table gives an overview of the resulting sections.

Section A: Materials

Section B: Form, Shape, Packaging, and Conditioning

Section C: Materials/products with special qualities and operation mode

Section D: General, Administration

Section E: Users /beneficiaries

Section F: Designated use

Section G: Scale and dimension

Section H: Residual attributes for Food, drink and meal

Section I: Residual attributes for construction/works

Section J: Residual attributes for computing, information technology or communication

Section K: Residual attributes for Energy and water distribution

Section L: Residual medical and laboratory attributes

Section M: Residual attributes for transport

Section P: Renting services

Section Q: Residual attributes for advertising and legal advisory services

Section R: Residual attributes for research services

Section S: Residual attributes for financial services

Section T: Residual attributes for printing services

Section U: Residual attributes for retail trade services

7.2 AREAS NOT BEING REVISED

For the above reasons and explanation, almost all areas of the CPV have been revised. The following divisions have undergone only minor changes. Eventually some individual codes have been added, but no changes to structure or hierarchy have been made:

41000000-9 Collected and purified water

65000000-3 Public utilities

70000000-1 Real estate services

73000000-2 Research and development services and related consultancy services
92000000-1 Recreational, cultural and sporting services

7.3 ISSUES WHEN REVISING THE CPV

The main issues when revising the CPV, were the following:

Some areas are evolving very fast, such as Information Technology, Telecom, Energy (such as bio-diesel related products). Therefore, it is difficult to be complete and to stay up-to-date. Some areas are very technical, such as biomedical and some chemical divisions. This also makes it complicated to be complete and up-to-date.

Reference was made to other nomenclatures, such as UNSPSC and eClass. It appeared that these other nomenclatures are not always up-to-date, and that they are not always complete. Also, these nomenclatures contain incoherences in their structure.

Feedback from stakeholders was very difficult to obtain. Feedback arrived very slowly, and was often very fragmented, referring to a limited number of codes, which were missing. We advice to install a point of contact (e.g. email address), to which users and stakeholders can address their issues, when they experience that codes are missing, or that the structure is incoherent. This will allow gathering and bundling user requirements as a preparation for a next version.

Revising the CPV must be done as a global exercise. It is not possible to rework some divisions only, or to work in an iterative way, and trying to freeze a limited set of divisions: changes in a certain division often have impact on other divisions.

7.4 THE FINAL REVISED CPV

EXPLANATORY NOTES FOR THE CPV

CPV 2006

EXPLANATORY NOTES

NOTE

7.7.1 I. EXPLANATORY NOTES FOR THE DIVISIONS 01 TO 44, AND 48 CONCERNING SUPPLIES

According to the Directive on public supplies.... COM(2000)275, CPV divisions from 01 to 44, and 48 include products object of contracts involving their purchase, lease rental or hire purchase, with or without option to buy.

The CPV is composed of a main vocabulary and of a supplementary vocabulary. The CPV main vocabulary consists of codes listing goods, works and services commonly used in the procurement. The CPV supplementary vocabulary is designed to help the contracting authority to describe the subject matter of contract more comprehensively.

In describing the products object of contracts the user can choose codes listed in the CPV main vocabulary and can add codes of the supplementary vocabulary if further qualitative information are necessary. It is possible to add more description with using the supplementary vocabulary in Section A to M with products, Section P to U with services and sometimes with products (like PA01-7 Hire), and Section D and F with products and services.

In case the contract involves the simple purchase of the product, it is sufficient to indicate the correspondent code of the CPV main vocabulary.

In case the contract involves the hire of the product, the CPV supplementary vocabulary code PA01-7 Hire can be added to the CPV main vocabulary code concerning the product of interest.

For instance, for the hire of food processing machinery it will be possible add the CPV supplementary vocabulary code PA01-7 Hire to the CPV main vocabulary code 42215200-8 Food-processing machinery:

PA01-7 Hire 42215200-8 Food-processing machinery

In case the contract involves the lease of the product, the CPV supplementary vocabulary code MA16-9 Lease can be added to the CPV main vocabulary code concerning the product of interest.

For instance, for the lease of passenger cars, the CPV supplementary vocabulary code MA16-9 lease can be added to the CPV main vocabulary code 34110000-1 Passenger cars:

MA16-9 Lease 34110000-1 Passenger cars

8 RESULTS OF CONSULTING STAKEHOLDERS

8.1 SELECTION OF STAKEHOLDERS

8.1.1 IDENTIFYING CONTACTS

Three input channels have been followed to identify useful contacts:

- A list of contacts having shown interest in the improvement of CPV in the past and other interesting contacts with relevant knowledge and experience.
This channel benefits from the motivation that users have shown and also provides some contacts with other stakeholders to gather expert's opinions on functional and technical usage of CPV.
- A list of contracting authorities in comparable domains, spread geographically over the Member States.
This channel is largely focussed on the practical day-to-day experience that these organisations have with CPV when submitting the tenders.
- A demand sent to the Member States for the identification of relevant organisations and contacts in their State.
This channel is expected to provide interesting points of contact as the members of the Workgroup on eProcurement can benefit from their contacts related to the topic as well as from their understanding on the organisation of purchasing bodies in their State.

8.1.2 SELECTION PROCEDURE

From the pool of about 150 contacts, a selection has been made to initiate the first contacts.

Care has been taken that in that selection, representatives of all stakeholders were present: public bodies, governments, professionally involved parties and software vendors. Also the geographical spread was taken into account as much as possible.

From the list of contacts, nearly all contacts were contacted, as their motivation and/or expertise is very valuable for the buy-in and the results.

From the list of contracting authorities a selection has been made on an analysis of the organizations current activity in TED (Tenders Electronic Daily). Queries have been performed with the on-line search engine on the organisation's number of tenders found (all kinds of documents types). The results give an indication on:

- How active the organisation has been recently in public purchasing
- The purchasing organisation and persons to contact
- The divisions the organisation purchases in

A check has also been done on the activity of the organizations over the past years by also searching in the TED Archives.

8.1.3 SELECTION RESULT

As a result of the above, around 100 organisations were contacted.

8.2 CONTACTING USERS

8.2.1 CONTACTING PROCEDURE

The first set of 35 contacts have been contacted by telephone in order to clearly explain the purpose of the survey, to get an idea on the contribution the contact could bring and to already have first feedback or make an appointment.

It was also mentioned that the purpose of the survey was to collect valuable practical information, not to control on the organisation's processes.

In case of language barriers, it was specified that the survey could be answered in the native language. Also the survey was available in English, French, German and Dutch.

All this is an attempt to get a maximum buy-in and thus good responses.

After the telephone introduction, a survey in the preferred language was sent in a personalized mail.

For the second group of contacts, personalized mails were sent, often asking for a Single Point of Contact. A follow-up call was done for the most valuable ones (according to the above criteria) and depending on the response of the first set of contacts.

The third group of contacts was a mixture of both mail- and phone contacts, mainly focussing on the areas of activity and Member States, which were not yet sufficiently represented in the sample of respondents.

8.3 CONTACT RESULTS

8.3.1 REMARKS ON CONTACTS

- Most of the time, several redirections to other persons were made in order to find the person with the relevant knowledge. This person often was the head of department or coordinator and difficult to contact. This lead to qualitatively better results than the mailing group.
- Governmental departments were difficult to contact as they often have a very decentralized structure, meaning that a person with experience on more than a few tenders was hard to find.
- Most of the time, little to no feedback was given on the phone directly: a list of questions was asked. But in general, the feedback about CPV is neutral to positive.
- In case of some professional organisations, or when dealing with persons that are closely concerned with the issues related to nomenclatures because they have set up a database or a nomenclature themselves, more general natured questions were asked on technical and functional aspects.
- Central purchasing bodies also seem to be the most valuable organisations to contact for details on structure and content. These were however not found easily, Member State assistance was required.
- End Users that only are concerned with a few tenders, sometimes only have a limited view on the issues, coordinators or heads of department on the other hand often do not have the practical knowledge.
- Although cooperation is promised on the phone, it apparently does not guarantee a feedback. A major follow-up action was necessary.

- Out of the 101 organizations contacted, about 35 % of feedback is actually received.
 - 22 surveys have been returned. The quality of these varies, some are quickly returned with almost no remarks, others contain valuable remarks and suggestions with examples. 5 organizations indicated that they could not participate (due to reorganization, for example).
 - The other feedback given is by the phone, on-the-spot and of a more general nature ('CPV should be simplified down' but with no specific examples, 'CPV should enable to link services to certain divisions of products' ...).
 - Professional organisations who deliver services to a specific part of the public market, seem to be likely to have the best insight in structural problems and codes missing
- Of all organisations contacted, 36% judged not to be sure to cooperate – either because a superior has to be consulted, or they are busy, or... either because the contact was not the relevant one. Sixteen percent of the contacts have been explicitly asked for or promised to send coordinates of relevant contacts.

The Department of Finance from Ireland had themselves gathered input and feedback from 29 relevant contacts. They have been provided to us for the purpose of this project. Adding this, leads to a total of 64 relevant feedbacks received.

The details of all feedback are extensively listed and described in the report “WP1 Intermediary Report – User Requirements Gathering V1.5”.
