VI. Other relevant information

One of the key aspects for the efficacy and cohesion of the NCPS relies on the coordinating bodies which constitute the second pillar of the System. These are: The National CP Counsel and the CP Commissions of AC,s.

The Counsel is a collegial organization under the Ministry of Interior that brings together leading representatives of public administrations at all levels. Its main goal is to ensure an effective and adequate coordination in the field of CP between the administrative bodies.

The same approach applies to regional governments. There is a CP Commission composed by representatives of the Autonomous Community government and state and local administrations included in its territory.
