The European Conference on Precision Livestock Farming (EC-PLF) takes place every two years, and during the last edition was confirmed that PLF can support and improve techniques to make smart farming a reality, creating added value for many stakeholders: animals, farmers, veterinarians, feed and product suppliers, health services, policy makers and of course the consumer.

Aim of this conference is the exchange of knowledge and experience through productive discussions to support further progress in the PLF field, where technology meets biology.

Due to the positive response to the previous congresses, we are expecting a high interest from animal scientists, not only from Europe, but from all over the world. The expected number of participants is approximately 300.
