Our motivation for working with this topic

Civil society and its advocates are the 'putty' in our society. The first project about inclusion shows that civic engagement is worthwhile and has potential.

The LAG's main motivation is their belief in the value of an active civil society and the potential role it can play for social inclusion.

This is what we did and do

The aim of the project 'Engagiert sein' ("Being engaged") is to mobilise civic engagement in municipalities in order to sustainably increase the social competence and capital of a rural community.

Those actors were important

A volunteer coordinator is responsible for identifying people in the region who are in need of support and those with potential for civic engagement and networking experience. This provides for close work between various social institutions and the community

Lessons learnt

Civic engagement can be mobilised, but an important success factor is collaboration with regional institutions and structures, using existing and potential synergies.
