Revised scope List of codes

2022

(September 2023 release)

Introduction

The list of internationally traded cultural goods by Combined Nomenclature (CN) classification was elaborated based on the criteria set out in the ESSnet-Culture final report \(2012\), which defines ‘cultural goods’ as products of ‘artistic creation’, conveying symbolic, aesthetic, artistic and spiritual values (e.g. works of art or crafts).

Based on these criteria, cultural goods and products were identified in seven cultural domains (heritage, books and press, visual arts, art craft, performing arts, audio-visual and multimedia and architecture). The initial list of cultural goods proposed in 2015 contained 11 meaningful cultural categories and served for the compilation of statistics until 2015 (see Annex 1 — International trade in cultural goods by old scope). The third edition (2016) of the pocketbook Culture statistics used this first definition of cultural products.

In 2016, the extension of the cultural scope was agreed with the aim to harmonise better EU methodological framework with that developed by UNESCO.

The revision of the scope consisted of following changes:

- extension of the category hand-made fabrics with some hand-made ornamental articles;
- creation of a category with jewellery articles;
- extension of audio-visual categories;
- split of audio-visual categories on music on the one side and film, video and video games and consoles on the other side.

The list has gone through another revision to take into account the changes brought to the CN classification in 2017 and 2022.

2017

The revision in particular affected the codes related to supports for audio-visual content. Numerous codes distinguishing sound from sound and image (making it possible to create a group with music on the one hand and a group with film and image on the other) were dropped. Instead, wider categories were created for ‘DVD-type supports’ and other ‘laser-reading system’ supports (e.g. CDs or Blu-rays) — see Table 3.

As the re-allocation of these new codes between former categories was not possible, one broad category covering all the recorded media formerly under ‘Music in manuscript, gramophone records, recorded magnetic tapes and optical media (CDs)’ and ‘Audio-visual and interactive media’ was created. At the same time, the video game consoles (previously included in the ‘Audio-visual and interactive media’), were carved out and presented as a separate group.

2022

The revision affected codes related to trading in antiques, works of art, as well as maps and hydrographical or similar charts. Numerous codes distinguishing collections, collector's pieces of antiques, and works of art were refined at a more detailed level – this refinement mostly concerned the time of origin. Codes related to maps and hydrographical or similar charts have been slightly reorganized.

Table 1 provides the list of cultural aggregates as relevant to the scope revision in 2016 and reflecting the changes in CN in 2017.

Tables 2.1 until 2.16 present the detailed content of cultural scope by displaying the list of CN codes composing the aggregates since the beginning of the time series. The tables provide the information about the period of validity of CN codes (since 2004) that often refers to the major revisions of CN in 2007, 2012, 2017 and 2022.

Table 3 displays the mapping of phased-out codes composing the categories RECMED and FILMVG until 2016 with their substitutes in the CN 2017.

Notes:

Period of validity informs about the years, the given code is valid for the reference period since 2004.

Acronyms and abbreviations used:

CN – Combined Nomenclature

n.e.d. – no end date; there is no end date of validity for a given code

n.e.s. - not elsewhere specified
