Annex 7. Single Permits data collection

Due to the recent implementation statistics on single permits are currently undergoing developments in most of the reporting countries. This new statistical area requires improvements of data processing systems to ensure comparable outputs. Therefore some improvements of the data quality are expected in 2015 together with some revisions of the current published statistics for 2013 reference period.

EU28
Belgium	Not applicable
Bulgaria	Data available
Czech Republic	Not applicable
Denmark	Not applicable
Germany	Data available
Estonia	Data available
Ireland	Not applicable
Greece	Not applicable
Spain	Not applicable
France	Missing data
Croatia	Data available
Italy	Not applicable
Cyprus	Not applicable
Latvia	Not applicable
Lithuania	Not applicable
Luxembourg	Data available
Hungary	Not applicable
Malta	Not applicable
Netherlands	Not applicable
Austria	Not applicable
Poland	Data available
Portugal	Data available
Romania	Data available
Slovenia	Not applicable
Slovakia	Data available
Finland	Not applicable
Sweden	Data available
EFTA
Iceland	Not applicable
Liechtenstein	Not applicable
Norway	Not applicable
Switzerland	Not applicable

		c
Table 1 Data	availability	/ for 2013	reference	period

Not applicable: Denmark, Ireland and the United Kingdom are not taking part in the adoption of the Single Permit Directive and are not bound by it or subject to its application. In the other EU Member States this directive was not implemented before the end of 2013 therefore, therefore data are not yet applicable. These Member States are expected to start deliver data since 2014 reference year. This Directive is not applicable in EFTA countries.

Germany Data relates to First permit only Estonia Single permits for education reasons are covering the period from 1st of September onwards. The figures related to the "renewed" category are estimated Croatia The "Family reasons" category contains cases related to temporary residence without rights to work. The "Other reasons" category contains cases related to long tern residence without rights to work. Luxembourg Data available on single permits does not allow to identify automatically "change of status" and "renewals" (as defined in this context, meaning that the renewals refer only to residence permits issued as a single permit that have been extended by the same type of residence permit). Poland Directive 2011/98/EU was transposed in 2014 and the data for 2013 is provided using comparable definitions Poland Data contain specific cases that do not belong to single permit category E.g. the number of residence permits for the purpose of family reunion contains children. Non-EU citizens who are permitted to work based on visa are not included in statistics. Portugal The Directive 2011/98/EU was transposed in 2014 and the data for 2013 is provided using comparable definitions Romania The Directive 2011/98/EU was transposed in 2014 and the data for 2013 is provided using comparable definitions Slovakia Statistical data on "Single permit" for reference year 2013 contain estimations of certain category (the national legislation provides different definitions than the technical guidelines provided by Eurostat). Romania <th>Bulgaria</th> <th>Directive 2011/98/EU was transposed in the Bulgarian legislation in 2013 entering into force on 24 December 2013. However, no Single Permits were issued during 2013.</th>	Bulgaria	Directive 2011/98/EU was transposed in the Bulgarian legislation in 2013 entering into force on 24 December 2013. However, no Single Permits were issued during 2013.
EstoniaSeptember onwards. The figures related to the "renewed" category are estimatedCroatiaThe "Family reasons" category contains cases related to temporary residence without rights to work. The "Other reasons" category contains cases related to long tern residence without rights to work.LuxembourgData available on single permits does not allow to identify automatically "change of status" and "renewals" (as defined in this context, meaning that the renewals refer only to residence permits issued as a single permit that have been extended by the same type of residence permit). "Education reasons" category is not applicable for single permit statistics.PolandDirective 2011/98/EU was transposed in 2014 and the data for 2013 is provided using comparable definitionsPortugalData contain specific cases that do not belong to single permit category E.g. the number of residence permits for the purpose of family reunion contains children. Non-EU citizens who are permitted to work based on visa are not included in statistics.PortugalThe Directive 2011/98/EU was transposed in 2014 and the data for 2013 is provided by Eurostat).RomaniaThe Directive 2011/98/EU was transposed in 2014 and the data for 2013 is provided using comparable definitionsRomaniaThe Directive 2011/98/EU was transposed in 2014 and the data for 2013 is provided using comparable definitionsSlovakiaStatistical data on "Single permit" for reference year 2013 contain estimations of certain categories. Data contains specific cases that do not belong to single permit category e.g. number of residence permits for the purpose of family reunion contains children. Non-EU citizens who are permitted to work based on visa are not included in statistic	Germany	Data relates to First permit only
Croatiawithout rights to work. The "Other reasons" category contains cases related to long tern residence without rights to work.LuxembourgData available on single permits does not allow to identify automatically "change of status" and "renewals" (as defined in this context, meaning that the renewals refer only to residence permits issued as a single permit that have been extended by the same type of residence permit). "Education reasons" category is not applicable for single permit statistics.PolandDirective 2011/98/EU was transposed in 2014 and the data for 2013 is provided using comparable definitionsPortugalData contain specific cases that do not belong to single permit category E.g. the number of residence permits for the purpose of family reunion contains children. Non-EU citizens who are permitted to work based on visa are not included in statistics.PortugalThe Directive 2011/98/EU was transposed in 2014 and the data for 2013 is provided by Eurostat).RomaniaThe Directive 2011/98/EU was transposed in 2014 and the data for 2013 is provided by Eurostat).RomaniaThe Directive 2011/98/EU was transposed in 2014 and the data for 2013 is provided using comparable definitionsSlovakiaStatistical data on "Single permit" for reference year 2013 contain estimations of certain categories. Data contains specific cases that do not belong to single permit category e.g. number of residence permits for the purpose of family reunion contains children.Non-EU citizens who are permit for reference year 2013 contain estimations of certain categories. Data contains specific cases that do not belong to single permit category e.g. number of residence permits for the purpose of family reunion contains children. Non-EU citi	Estonia	September onwards. The figures related to the "renewed" category are estimated
Luxembourgautomatically "change of status" and "renewals" (as defined in this context, meaning that the renewals refer only to residence permits issued as a single permit that have been extended by the same type of residence permit). "Education reasons" category is not applicable for single permits statistics.PolandDirective 2011/98/EU was transposed in 2014 and the data for 2013 is provided using comparable definitionsPortugalData contain specific cases that do not belong to single permit category E.g. the number of residence permits for the purpose of family reunion contains children. Non-EU citizens who are permitted to work based on visa are not included in statistics. It is not possible to distinguish between the "Change of status" and "Renewed" category (the national legislation provides different definitions than the technical guidelines provided by Eurostat).RomaniaThe Directive 2011/98/EU was transposed in 2014 and the data for 2013 is provided using comparable definitionsSlovakiaStatistical data on "Single permit" for reference year 2013 contain estimations of certain categories. Data contains specific cases that do not belong to single permit category e.g. number of residence permits for the purpose of family reunion contains children. Non-EU citizens who are permitted to work based on visa are not included in statistics.	Croatia	without rights to work. The "Other reasons" category contains cases related to long tern residence
PolandDirective 2011/98/EU was transposed in 2014 and the data for 2013 is provided using comparable definitionsPortugalData contain specific cases that do not belong to single permit category E.g. the number of residence permits for the purpose of family reunion contains children. Non-EU citizens who are permitted to work based on visa are not 	Luxembourg	automatically "change of status" and "renewals" (as defined in this context, meaning that the renewals refer only to residence permits issued as a single permit that have been extended by the same type of residence permit).
Portugalnumber of residence permits for the purpose of family reunion contains children. Non-EU citizens who are permitted to work based on visa are not included in statistics. It is not possible to distinguish between the "Change of status" and "Renewed" category (the national legislation provides different definitions than the technical guidelines provided by Eurostat).RomaniaThe Directive 2011/98/EU was transposed in 2014 and the data for 2013 is provided using comparable definitionsSlovakiaStatistical data on "Single permit" for reference year 2013 contain estimations of certain categories. Data contains specific cases that do not belong to single permit category e.g. number of residence permits for the purpose of family reunion contains children. 	Poland	Directive 2011/98/EU was transposed in 2014 and the data for 2013 is provided
Romania provided using comparable definitions Statistical data on "Single permit" for reference year 2013 contain estimations of certain categories. Data contains specific cases that do not belong to single permit category e.g. number of residence permits for the purpose of family reunion contains children. Non-EU citizens who are permitted to work based on visa are not included in statistics.	Portugal	number of residence permits for the purpose of family reunion contains children. Non-EU citizens who are permitted to work based on visa are not included in statistics. It is not possible to distinguish between the "Change of status" and "Renewed" category (the national legislation provides different definitions than the technical guidelines provided by Eurostat).
Slovakiacertain categories. Data contains specific cases that do not belong to single permit category e.g. number of residence permits for the purpose of family reunion contains children. Non-EU citizens who are permitted to work based on visa are not included in statistics.	Romania	provided using comparable definitions
Sweden	Slovakia	certain categories. Data contains specific cases that do not belong to single permit category e.g. number of residence permits for the purpose of family reunion contains children. Non-EU citizens who are permitted to work based on visa are not included in Sweden	