

Roxane Silberman background is quantitative sociology with publications in the domain of labor market, migrations and discrimination. She is Emeritus senior researcher at the Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique (CNRS) in France and Honorary Professor at GENES (Groupe des Écoles Nationales d'Économie et de Statistique). Since the 90ies, she has played a major role in France in opening access to official and sensitive microdata. As the representative of researchers in economics and social sciences from 2009 to 2019 and since 2020 as qualified expert nominated by the Ministry of Economy, she sits at the board of the National Council for Statistical Information (CNIS, Conseil National de l'Information Statistique). Since 2015 Roxane Silberman is Scientific Advisor for international affairs at CASD (French Secure Data Hub) providing remote access to confidential data particularly in the domain of official and administrative data. For her merits in scientific work, Ms Silberman was awarded by Chevalier de la Légion d'Honneur in 2000.