Glossary:Real values

Statistics Explained

Real values are monetary values adjusted or deflated for changes in prices, and are typically used for financial and income flows.

The figure is determined by means of another value, for example deflating employee compensation by the consumer price index . An income is deflated via an appropriate price index based on a basket of goods and services reflecting how this income is spent.

Related concepts

- Price index

- Prices