When world leaders signed the Convention on the Rights of the Child 25 years ago, they promised to guarantee every child the right to life, to be educated and healthy, to be treated fairly and to be heard. But has the world kept its promises? As Nelson Mandela said, “There can be no keener revelation of a society’s soul than the way in which it treats its children.” Can today’s children look forward to a brighter future? And what about the children of tomorrow? (Source: https://europa.eu/eyd2015)
