About the Signatory

[Provide a description of the Company/Organisation and the relevant products, activities and services it and its subsidiaries offer, which are covered by the listed commitments and measures.]

Describe also the nature and specificities of each of the Company's/Organisation's relevant products, activities and services and the types of disinformation-related issues observed on the service.]

A description of the products, activities and services relevant to this Code is included below.

Service name	Description of the service
Google advertising	Google offers a range of products and services for advertisers and publishers. This includes selling its own inventory to advertisers (for example, on Google Search or YouTube). In addition we help non-Google publishers make money through the display of ads. When subscribing to commitments and measures as "Google advertising" in the present Code, we refer to all of these components: all ads bought through Google Ads, including those running on Google Search, YouTube, and the Google Display Network.

	To achieve our goals of providing credible and useful information to our users, we need to support a healthy digital advertising ecosystem—one that is trustworthy and transparent, and works for users, advertisers, and publishers. To that end, we have policies governing the use of our ads products. These policies are designed not only to abide by laws but to ensure a safe and positive experience for our users. This means that our policies prohibit content that we believe to be harmful to users and the overall advertising ecosystem. Our Publisher policies aim to strike a particularly delicate balance - providing room for publishers to engage, report on and express controversial topics and opinions, while ensuring that we are preventing user harm and instilling trust in our advertiser partners that their ads are running against appropriate content. We take compliance with our policies very seriously and take action against violative ads & sites under our policies. Several of our ads policies are directly applicable to disinformation. These include policies against unreliable claims, hate, and harassment or dangerous content.
Search	Our mission is to organize the world’s information and make it universally accessible and useful. Every time a search is made, there are thousands, sometimes millions, of webpages or other content that might be a match. Google uses its robust systems to present the most helpful information in response to a query. Most of our Search index is built through the work of software known as crawlers. These automatically visit publicly accessible webpages and follow links on those pages, much like you would if you were browsing content on the web. They go from page to page and store information about what they find on these pages and other publicly-accessible content in Google's Search index.

When crawlers find a webpage, our systems render the content of the page, just as a browser does. We take note of key signals — from keywords to website freshness — and we keep track of it all in the Search index.

The Google Search index contains hundreds of billions of webpages and is well over 100,000,000 gigabytes in size. It's like the index in the back of a book — with an entry for every word seen on every webpage we index. When we index a webpage, we add it to the entries for all of the words it contains.

With the vast amount of information available, finding what you need would be nearly impossible without some help sorting through it. Google's ranking systems are designed to do just that: sort through hundreds of billions of webpages and other content in our Search index to present the most relevant, useful results in a fraction of a second.

To give you the most useful information, Search algorithms look at many factors and signals, including the words of your query, relevance and usability of pages, expertise of sources, and your location and settings. The weight applied to each factor varies depending on the nature of your query. For example, the freshness of the content plays a bigger role in answering queries about current news topics than it does about dictionary definitions. More on ranking is available here.

	Search engines generally lack a direct, contractual relationship with content creators. Often, the only information Google possesses about a given website is what is available to anyone with a web browser. Therefore, Google Search often cannot report metrics on account-level enforcement. Instead of relying, first and foremost, on removing individual pieces of content, Google Search’s primary tool to counter low-authoritative content on our service is to promote authoritative information. Given how Google Search encompasses trillions of web pages, images, videos and other content, the results might occasionally contain material that some find objectionable, offensive, or problematic. We’ve carefully developed the content policies for Google Search to balance the real concerns about such issues, alongside the need for a search engine to provide access to information. Our article, Maximize access to information, explains more about this approach. More detailed information on our efforts to deliver the most relevant and reliable information is available on our “How Google Search works” webpage.
YouTube	YouTube is an open video platform where anyone can upload a video and share it with the world. With this openness comes incredible opportunities, as well as challenges – which is why we're always working to balance creative expression with our responsibility to protect the community from harmful content. At the heart of our approach are the four Rs: we Remove content that violates our policies as quickly as possible, Reduce the spread of harmful misinformation and content that brushes up against our policy lines, Raise up authoritative sources when people are looking for news and information and Reward trusted, eligible creators and artists.

Our commitment to responsibility starts with our Community Guidelines. These policies are designed to ensure that our community stays protected. They set out what's allowed and not allowed on YouTube, and apply to all types of content on our platform, including videos, comments, links and thumbnails. Certain types of misleading or deceptive content with serious risk of egregious harm are not allowed on YouTube. This includes certain types of misinformation that can cause real-world harm.

Each of our policies is developed in partnership with a wide range of external industry and policy experts, as well as YouTube creators, and we systematically review our policies to make sure that they remain current. We remove content that violates our policies as quickly as possible, using a combination of people and machine learning to detect potentially problematic content on a massive scale. In addition, we rely on the YouTube community as well as experts in our Trusted Flagger programme to help us spot potentially problematic content by reporting it directly to us. We also go to great lengths to make sure that content that violates our policies isn't widely viewed, or even viewed at all, before it's removed. Our automated flagging systems help us detect and review content even before it's seen by our community.

Once such content is identified, human content reviewers evaluate whether it violates our policies. If it does, we remove the content and use it to train our machines for better coverage in the future. Our content reviewers also protect content that has a clear educational, documentary, scientific or artistic [EDSA] purpose.

Information about our policy enforcement can be found in our Community Guidelines Enforcement Report which we publish on a quarterly basis. More information about YouTube as a platform is available at How YouTube Works.

NB - By subscribing to commitments and measures throughout this document, these Services indicate their intention of meeting and in some places exceeding the requirements set out by these Commitments and Measures. Doing so will often require significant investments in developing, testing, and vetting new functionalities or reporting procedures such that they can reach the level of robustness required by the Code. In some cases this might take longer than the stated 6 month implementation period—especially as we will be working to satisfy other similarly demanding requirements arising from European legislations like the Digital Services Act in the coming year. However, in the spirit of the Preamble, we are committed to providing more detail over time and we will provide a progress update as part of the first baseline report.

Disclaimers:

- The Commitments and Measures set out in this document are entered into without prejudice to the Very Large Online Platform (VLOP) or Very Large Online Search Engine (VLOSE) designation of the relevant services under the DSA.
- Likewise, signature does not constitute agreement that all Services provided by a Signatory, which may be categorized as VLOPs or VLOSEs under the DSA, are in scope of the Code.

	Measure 20.2	N/A
Reason for not subscribing to Commitment 20 (if applicable):
The Commission’s 2021 Guidance notes this is an issue the Code’s Signatories “could” explore; and the negotiations of the updated Code of Practice established that this is a direction Relevant Signatories are encouraged but not expected to sign up to. As such we will continue to consider whether and which provenance tools and procedures are pertinent to our services over time and may update this subscription document accordingly in the future.

Commitment 21 Relevant Signatories commit to strengthen their efforts to better equip users to identify Disinformation. In particular, in order to enable users to navigate services in an informed way, Relevant Signatories commit to facilitate, across all Member States languages in which their services are provided, user access to tools for assessing the factual accuracy of sources through fact-checks from fact-checking organisations that have flagged potential Disinformation, as well as warning labels from other authoritative sources	Measure 21.1	YouTube Search	Parts of this measure are neither pertinent to Search nor YouTube—for instance, both use different ways of highlighting fact-checks. Both services subscribe to the parts of the measure that are pertinent to their operations.

	Measure 22.6	N/A

	Measure 22.7	Search YouTube
Reason for not subscribing to Commitment 22 (if applicable): The Commission's 2021 Guidance notes this is an issue the Code's Signatories "could" explore; and the negotiations of the updated Code of Practice, established that this is a direction Relevant Signatories are encouraged but not expected to sign up to. As such we will continue to consider whether and which trustworthiness indicators and tools are pertinent to our services and update this subscription document accordingly over time.
Commitment 23 Relevant Signatories commit to provide users with the functionality to flag harmful false and/or misleading information that violates Signatories policies or terms of service	Measure 23.1	Search YouTube
	Measure 23.2	Search YouTube
Reason for not subscribing to Commitment 23 (if applicable):
Commitment 24 Relevant Signatories commit to inform users whose content or accounts has been subject to enforcement actions (content/accounts labelled, demoted or otherwise enforced on) taken on the basis of violation of policies relevant to this section (as outlined in Measure 18.2), and provide them with the possibility to appeal against the enforcement action at issue and to handle complaints in a timely, diligent, transparent, and objective manner and to reverse the action without undue delay where the complaint is deemed to be founded	Measure 24.1	YouTube	This measure is not relevant to Search (e.g. Webmasters do not need to have a Google account to be indexed in Search; their content lives on their websites; and most do not have a contractual relationship with Search).

Reason for not subscribing to Commitment 24 (if applicable):
Commitment 25 In order to help users of private messaging services to identify possible disinformation disseminated through such services, Relevant Signatories that provide messaging applications commit to continue to build and implement features or initiatives that empower users to think critically about information they receive and help them to determine whether it is accurate, without any weakening of encryption and with due regard to the protection of privacy	Measure 25.1	N/A	Not applicable to relevant Google services in scope of the Code.
	Measure 25.2	N/A	Not applicable to relevant Google services in scope of the Code.
Reason for not subscribing to Commitment 25 (if applicable):
This commitment is not applicable for Google's services in scope of the Code.
