ESF+ supported initiative in Croatia

Taste of Home (Okus Doma)

Refugees and migrants can have difficulties in integrating into Croatian society, due to a range of societal stereotypes which lead to prejudice and discrimination, as well as to lack of access to adequate support services. In 2014, the Centre for Peace Studies (CPS), a Croatian NGO, published the Taste of Home cookbook, sharing personal and culinary stories of refugees. Culinary workshops and public presentations were organised in Croatian cities with refugee shelters. Refugees presented traditional food from their home countries and regions and shared them with local citizens in a bid to break down cultural stereotypes and bring together the local community with its new residents. Following the success of the cookbook initiative, Taste of Home was established as a social enterprise in 2016, offering catering services prepared by refugees and migrants, supporting integration, whilst providing them with a source of income to become financially independent. Taste of Home gathered 30 refugees and volunteers, united in combating prejudices against refugees and migrants in Croatia. Mainstreaming refugee and migrant stories and personal experiences through gastronomy helped raise awareness of the situation of refugees among Croatian citizens.
