Dear Sir,

I am sending this message on behalf of, and as Editor of Publications of, the Indian Academy of Sciences. It is generally agreed that the Academy's eleven journals are probably the best science research journals published from India, and all of them are covered by the ISI "Current Contents". As a uniform policy, for several years the Academy has made all its journals available freely on the web, including full texts of all articles, to the scientific community worldwide. This adherence to the Open Access Policy is motivated by our own desire to bring the work in all our journals to the notice of the widest possible audience quickly, and in turn to encourage scientists in India to submit some of their best work to our journals. Thus on both counts, this Academy attaches great importance to the Open Access concept and movement.
