The Commission is strongly committed to ensure accessibility of the Europa website. It has already adopted WCAG 2.0 compliance level AA for the majority of its web assets, in line with the recommendations of the W3C, which are reflected in the Information Providers Guide. A dedicated section of the IPG outlines in detail the criteria to be applied such as keyboard accessibility, content usability or screen reader support.

This guarantees that not only visually impaired people can use the Commission's websites, but anybody with any kind of disability. The Commission also continues investing in raising awareness and training web masters on web accessibility.

However, there are still some pages and documents which have not yet been assessed towards WCAG 2.0 level AA compliance, which explains why not all the content on the Commission's websites is accessible.

The Commission will undertake, as soon as possible, any efforts to improve its web accessibility. The process will be managed and monitored by our internal accessibility experts.
