1. Opening speeches:

- Introduction by Mr Karamitsos (European Commission, Deputy Director General, DG MOVE)

- Commissioner Bulc:

"When I speak I create!" Let's be conscious of that today, it is an important topic that we will be addressing. Being a systemic thinker, I am always looking at the full picture. We need to find a gender balance in the transport sector. Indeed, only 22% of women are employed in the transport field, 46% in the general economy. We need to work for sustainable solutions and we count on you to help us. This event is the result of a brainstorming workshop which took place last September and led to this Conference today. We need to continue with further events and we will.

Last September we already came to some conclusions, such as the need to avoid perpetuating stereotypes, there is still a lack of data and awareness about the situation of women in transport, and, in too many cases, there are unattractive working conditions from a woman's point of view.

There has been very important milestones before today's event.

Ms Tapardel (Member of the European Parliament) organised a hearing on 3 June 2015 in the European Parliament and Ms Sharma (Entrepreneur) prepared an opinion of the European Economic and Social Committee (EESC) on 1st July 2015 stressing the specific objective of developing entrepreneurship in transport for women. A workshop was also dedicated to the issue in the Conference on a Social Agenda for Transport in June 2015. Ms Sanchez de Madariaga has kindly agreed to debrief us about the more recent workshop organised on 19 April 2016 in Warsaw at the Transport Research Arena (TRA) entitled “Working in transport – where are the women?”

These events are all geared towards the same goal, which is to achieve a commitment to make transport more gender balanced and in more general terms, make it attractive for women.

In this regards, automation and digitalisation represent a unique opportunity to facilitate the entry of women in the sector. I am looking forward to collaboration and, at the end of today's discussions, we hope to know what is the next step. Be engaging, be provocative, come with ideas to engage all the potential in societies!

Ms Spanou, Director in DG Justice and Consumers, representing Commissioner Jourova confirmed the very strong commitment of DG JUST towards gender equality (see full speech enclosed)
Ms Tapardel (Member of the TRAN Committee of the European Parliament, S&D):

Only 2 persons out of 10 working in transport are women. There is a need for more empowerment of women in the transport sector. Experience shows that it is possible for women to be successful in the transport sector - there are many positive examples. There is no shame in working in this sector as a woman, despite the stereotypes.

Ms Sharma (Entrepreneur, Member of the European Economic and Social Committee)

http://www.mediade.si/aktualno/blogiade/see-me-engine-growth/
See me as a decision maker, I am able to contribute. I want the same pay, the same working conditions, I want to be given the right to design the next airbus, the new technological device which will make transport more safe, more environmentally friendly. You see me as a worker and as a woman, but also an engine of the growth of the European Union. We need to give more visibility to women and engage them in the change, collect data, identify the obstacles and dis-construct the barriers. Women have a role to play in this sector.

"You must be the change you want to see, no excuses."

Ms Sanchez de Madariaga gave a debrief of the workshop held in Warsaw earlier this week which discussed the following issues:

1. Attractiveness of transport professions: digitalisation makes it particularly safe and secure for women
2. New opportunities offered by new technologies and digitalisation: substitute for muscles
3. What are the measures needed to increase women participation in the transport sector: which business, educational models, which rules to change?
4. Opportunities: women are more careful about driving, etc. They are less aggressive, more conscious about safety but they encounter obstacles to career.
2. Hosting team: presentation of the day and introductory remarks by a few participants

3. Sharing of experiences – best scoring stories

   Johanna Funck, truck driver in the North of Sweden:

   About three years ago, I started working with a newly created truck company transporting iron ore from the mines up in the North of the country. 60 trucks with a total weight of 90 ton were to be used.

   400 drivers were about to be recruited and we were aiming for a mix of 50/50 men and women. In the beginning the company was looking for people with long experience but after a while, the company saw that a mix of people was much more interesting. We realised that we needed to form a group of workers with mixed experience, age and gender but with the same attitudes.
There is a problem with "macho attitude" in the truck business which young men often apply but women often find it easier to use their talents, such as careful and fuel effective driving and they has often very high safety values and are very customers oriented. The working environment became more satisfying. Drivers liked to come to work because they liked to see this diversity among the drivers.

Unfortunately we were not able to complete our transport assignment but after two years we were 200 employed with 30 % women / 70 % men.

Ruth Waring, Chair of Women in logistics in the UK

We organised an event which was attended by 50 people; 47 were women and 3 men. One of these men came to see me after the event and he shared the same experience as other female participants: it was a fantastic event, good food, good discussion, very useful ... their best event ever. But he went on saying that he felt awkward among all these women...This is what I told him: "you know what? welcome to my daily life!". This is how to get a man understand what it is to be in a minority!

Alice Saive, airline pilot

I have always wanted to be a pilot ever since I was a kid. When my sister became a pilot, I thought that I could do it as well. Our mother was not very happy, it was very expensive. In my days, it cost the equivalent of 50,000 euros to become a line pilot. Today it costs 85,000 euros to be a pilot in Belgium.

You have to be highly motivated, because you always have negative reactions, particularly from women. I am now Captain on an Airbus 320 and, nowadays, the reactions are much more positive than in the past. We have much more to offer than some men in this job. I fly my plane gently, saving fuel, trying to avoid too much cabin pressure for the small children's ears and lungs, dealing with aggressive behaviour as softly as possible, and helping the cabin crew to find solutions.

However, there are lots of problems in the industry these days. There are people who have to pay to fly. Access to the profession is even more difficult as a woman. There is the cost for training like for anybody else, but the issue of pregnancy can become almost impossible to overcome if you don’t have someone to back you financially: when you are pregnant, you are grounded for one year at least (to protect the health of the baby) and you lose almost 70% of your salary. Something should be done about that! Part time is also a problem, it is difficult to be there for the important events at home (birthdays, etc). For the next generation of women's pilot, the job should be made more compatible with family life. You should not have to choose anymore!

Commissioner Bulc - reaction after hearing these stories:
We have a lot of work to do! Let's do it one step at the time. Let's get today a blue print for the next steps and hopefully next year, we will see the difference.

4. World Café (conversation tables in small groups)

Question: "what conditions need to be put in place in order to attract more women to work in transport?"

What is your top condition?

- There is an issue about resilience, women in transport need to understand that they will come across difficulties, stereotypes, obstacles,...They need to be aware of that and work together in a network where possible.

- Family is the main point: women need to put logistics in place to address family needs in very tight daily schedules ( organisational skills).

- Leadership and role models

Creating a Joint Committee meeting FEMM & TRAN in EP to present the outcome of the event

Ines A.S with Regula, Marielou, Jean-Louis

FEMM Committee does not normally discuss sectoral issues. So it could be useful to organise a presentation of the outcome of the meeting by Commissioner Bulc before a joint Committee.

Proposals:
- Identify gaps in legislative framework. Gender mainstreaming clause is not enough
- Need for more women in middle management
- Support structure: targets, quotas, …Create a bonus for more women employed

6. Conclusions

European Parliament:

Ms Tapardel: it was another step in the right direction. After the kick-off event organised in the EP two years ago, today's event supported by Commissioners Bulc and Jourova is very important and both have to be thanked. We need to raise awareness at EU level to address this gender gap. It is an important challenge This event has been a great opportunity:
— To share and analyse experiences, listen to each other stories
— Show how employing women can bring more benefits.
— Automatisation and digitalisation will offer more opportunities to women

We need to get rid stereotypes and remove silos. We need to have female words for Captain, pilot, etc. 😊 Let’s continue and Thank you for your engagement and your efforts. Let’s work together!

European, Economic and Social Committee

Ms Sharma: can a man put his feet in my shoes? We need men in the room 50/50 to achieve our goals. Are women using their purchasing power to reach this objective? You should! We should. Let’s continue this work.

Member State: Sweden

Ms Webber: this is a great initiative, great discussion, it is very useful. We need a leader to lead on this. Thanks Commission for taking this initiative and leading the work! Real people stories is so useful, this is how we can push this. We also need men to push this agenda. Let’s discuss this further in the Council.

Member State: Slovakia

Ms Pančúrová: COM has asked us to take up this issue of women in transport and we have agreed to put it on the agenda of the Transport Council of 1st December under the Slovak presidency.
European Commission, DG MOVE:

Mr Colson: the summary of the actions proposed during this meeting and the contacts of participants will be circulated. A broader formal consultation will be organised in a few months. Work in Council will start in a working group to prepare for Council's discussion of December as indicated by the Slovak representative. On the basis of all that, concrete actions will be proposed.

We want to deliver and we count on you. We will contact you to fine tune some initiatives proposed today. The Commission is committed and will keep in touch.

Thank you for coming, for giving your time to this event and above all thank you for your dedication, your commitment and motivation.

Participants:

Dear participants, in one word: "What do you take away from this day?"

- Lots of energy and new horizons
- I am committed to deliver in the EP
- Getting to know so many great people
- Commitment and dedication
- Wonderful opportunity to share personal experiences
- Partnership of same people united by the same vision
- New ideas, inspiration and more energy
- Great event with so many enthusiastic people
- Not the only fighter: I realise that I am not alone after all!
- I am impressed to see so many energetic people
- Hope for better working conditions for women
- Impressed by people I met today
- Future looks brighter
- Expectation to be treated better as passenger by women workers
- Share diversity and reboot all these ideas
- Very inspiring ideas and stories
- Learned and gained more happiness (Sweden is good place to live and to work) hope to bring a bit of that to all women in Europe
- We are different but stronger together, hopeful for the future
- Compelling need to act, so let's work
- Indulgence to take a day out of work, very inspiring
- Great to have so many other sectors present
- Impressed by the high level commitment
- Great to see that the Commission is so serious and committed
- Feel very inspired after hearing you and motivated to convince other women to enter into the transport sector
- Great to see commitment and also by institutions, a lot to take back home and spread the word
- Feel responsible to push this agenda further
- Surprise to see that the UK is not so behind compared to other countries - fantastic participatory day
- Hope to see situation of women in transport to become better in Italy
- Very successful day, pleasant experience
